Greetings

We, the scribes of our Alma Mater's Diary for the year that is past, give to you this our book, with the hope that upon its pages you may find inscribed clearly and truly the record of this period of her activity.

THE ARMY OF INVASION

The Invasion of the East

By One of the Team

On September 2, 1910, the baseball team of the University of Chicago left for a series of games in Japan, at the invitation of Waseda University of Tokyo. The party consisted of Professor Bliss, faculty representative; Manager Page; Captain Pegues; Paul, Cleary, Sunderland, Ehrhorn, Collings, Boyle, Steinbrecher, Glen, and Orno Roberts, and Baird. In spite of the fact that there were thirteen in the party and that we left on a Friday night, the team had a wonderfully successful trip from every standpoint.

Following a strenuous week of "barnstorming," in which we won a majority of the games, we arrived in Seattle on Thursday, September 8. Here we were met by an enthusiastic crowd of Japanese representing the Mikado team, champions of the Pacific Coast Japanese League, and royally entertained. The next day, however, we beat our hosts by a score of 15 to 1, the Japanese players being exceedingly nervous because of their desire to register the first defeat against our players by a Japanese team.

Saturday morning, September 10, found the "bunch" waving farewell to the United States as the Kamakura Maru slowly turned and headed down Puget Sound, bound for Yokohama, 4300 miles away. As the ship stopped for only a few hours at Victoria, B. C., we were soon going again in earnest. We continued for sixteen days without sighting so much as a single sail, and, although a few of us experienced some new feelings, mostly unpleasant, we enjoyed the voyage over. Practice was indulged in regularly in order to keep in condition for our series in Tokyo. But this was anything but beneficial to the manager's stock of baseballs, which dwindled rapidly as ball after ball was thrown into the water.

We sighted land for the first time on the afternoon of September 25, when we passed a northern island of Japan, and the next morning we ran up Tokyo Bay to Yokohama. We were heartily welcomed at the wharf by "Stuffy" Place, a former maroon athlete, and several other "foreigners," together with a crowd of Japanese. As we went from the wharf to the railroad station on our way to Tokyo, we experienced our first ride in "Homo-mobiles." Carriages were waiting for us at the Shimbashi station in Tokyo, and we were shortly established in the Imperial hotel.

Despite the fact that it rained seventeen out of the twenty-eight days we spent in Tokyo, we managed to play seven games, winning all of them. We beat our host's, Waseda University, by the scores of 9 to 2, 5 to 0, and 15 to 4, but were forced to do our best before we registered three victories over Keio University by the scores of 3 to 1, 2 to 1 (10 innings), and 5 to 2 (10 innings). The second game was won from the Waseda alumni team by the score of 11 to 2.

Although we had been frequently warned against the Japanese players, we were surprised to see the high-class game they played. They are excellent fielders, daring and swift base runners, and accurate throwers, playing a "heady," fighting game until the last man is out in the last inning. Their weakest spot is in batting. The games were exceedingly well attended, the crowds running from 6,000 to 13,000 people. As rooters the Japanese were wonderful, and even after we had left the field they would remain standing in their seats, singing their inspiring songs and waving their flags in the face of defeat. Enough cannot be said of the way in which the games were conducted, and especially of the way in which they were umpired. Baron Mishima acted as umpire and his decisions in all cases were unquestionable.

After we had passed a most enjoyable month in Tokyo, we left for a tour of western Japan as guests of the Osaka Mainichi Shimbun, the largest newspaper of Osaka. We played three games for them in Osaka against Waseda University, winning all three by the scores of 8 to 4, 20 to 0, and 12 to 2. These games were well attended, as ours was the first foreign team to play in that city. In the week we saw the cities of Naru and Kyoto with their wonderful temples, and on October 31 sailed from Kobe through the beautiful Inland Sea and across to Shanghai in China. We spent two days in this "Gay City of the East" and then sailed south to Hongkong. It was at this point that we boarded the good ship Kaifong, 987 tons, and started across the rough China sea for Manila. The captain said we had a good voyage.

The day following we found ourselves on the ball field facing the Marines, the champions of Manila. There, in the midst of rain and mud, we met our first defeat in the Orient. A few days later, however, we turned the tables on them, and then won a double header from an All-Filipino team and the 12th Infantry team. This ended our baseball schedule.

It was with lagging steps that we left the Americans who had entertained us so royally for a week, and got into the launch which was to take us out to the ship. In fact, Ehrhorn, Boyle, and Steinbrecher yielded to the situation, and remained in Manila for a few months in order to see more of the islands. Professor Bliss, Captain Pegues, and Ralph Cleary left us on the return trip at Hongkong to go westward around the world, while we came eastward. Thus, there were only seven of the party, Manager Page, Sunderland, Paul, Collings, Glen, and Orno Roberts, and Baird, who landed at Seattle on December 23 after a trip across the wintry Pacific. Glen and Orno Roberts spent Christmas with relatives in Tacoma, Baird stopped in Montana, and the remaining four arrived in Chicago on the night of December 26 to be met by an enthusiastic crowd of rooters. Thus ended the 20,000 mile journey. Before I close I wish to express to the University and to President Judson the team's deepest appreciation for the wonderful opportunity given them of seeing the Far East.

Mr. Rockefeller's Gift to the University of Chicago

TREVOR ARNETT

IN a letter dated December 13, 1910, addressed to the President and Trustees of the University of Chicago, Mr. John D. Rockefeller informed them that he had caused to be set aside for the University of Chicago, from the funds of the General Education Board, income bearing securities of the present market value of approximately $10,000,000, the same to be delivered to the University in ten equal annual installments beginning January 1, 1911, each installment to bear income to the University from the date of such delivery only. In making this great gift Mr. Rockefeller closed in a single and final gift his contributions to the University. He states in his letter as follows:

"The sum I now give is intended to make provision, with such gifts as may reasonably be expected from others, for such added buildings, equipment and endowment as the departments thus far established will need. This gift completes the task which I have set before myself. The founding and support of new departments or the development of the varied and alluring fields of applied science, including medicine, I leave to the wisdom of the Trustees as funds may be furnished for these purposes by other friends of the University.

"In making an end to my gifts to the University, as I now do, and in withdrawing from the Board of Trustees my personal representatives, whose resignations I enclose, I am acting on an early and permanent conviction that this great institution being the property of the people should be controlled, conducted and supported by the people, in whose generous efforts for its upbuilding I have been permitted simply to cooperate; and I could wish to consecrate anew to the great cause of education the funds which I have given, if that were possible; to present the institution a second time, in so far as I have aided in founding it, to the people of Chicago and the West; and to express my hope that under their management and with their generous support the University may be an increasing blessing to them, to their children and to future generations."

The record of donations made to the University by Mr. Rockefeller brought to an end by this gift is a notable one. On May 15, 1889, he made his first gift of $600,000 to the American Baptist Education Society to be used for an endowment fund for a college to be established in Chicago, the income only of which was to be used for current expenses on condition that $400,000 more be given by good and responsible parties to be used for the purpose of purchasing land and erecting buildings. From that date to December 13, 1910, when he made the gift of $10,000,000, he has donated to the University sums aggregating approximately $35,000,000. The gifts were for a variety of purposes. The greater portion has been for endowment, while some were for purchasing land adjacent to the University on each side of the Midway to assure to the University a sufficient amount of land contiguous to the original campus for all possible expansion for generations to come, some, though small in amount compared with the total gifts, were for buildings, and the remainder was given for current expenses and such special needs as arose from time to time.

In making the gift of $10,000,000 Mr. Rockefeller stated that it was his desire that at least the sum of $1,500,000 be used for the erection and furnishing of the University Chapel. His idea of the relation the chapel should hold to the University is expressed as follows:

"It is my desire that at least the sum of One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,500,000) be used for the erection and furnishing of a University Chapel. As the spirit of religion should penetrate and control the University, so that building which represents religion ought to be the central and dominant feature of the University group. The Chapel may appropriately embody those architectural ideals from which the other buildings, now so beautifully harmonious, have taken their spirit, so that all the other buildings on the campus will seem to have caught their inspiration from the Chapel and in turn will seem to be contributing of their worthiest to the Chapel. In this way the group of University buildings, with the Chapel centrally located and dominant in its architecture, may proclaim that the University in its ideal, is dominated by the spirit of religion, all its departments are inspired by the religious feeling, and all its work is directed to the highest ends."

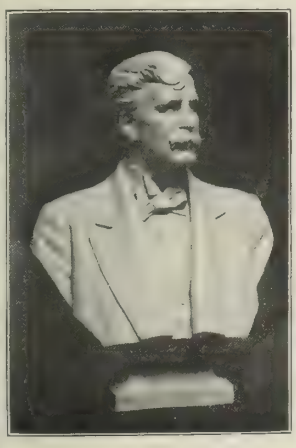
With the exception of the sum required for the chapel the rest of the fund may be used at the discretion of the Trustees for land, buildings, or endowment, but no part of the principal sum shall be used for current expenses. It is hoped, however, with the exception of that designated for the Chapel, it will be possible to set aside practically all, if not all, of the gift for endowment purposes and that in the future as in the past the citizens of Chicago and the West will provide funds for the various buildings as they are needed.

The Trustees of the University of Chicago in accepting the generous gift of Mr. Rockefeller passed the following resolutions:

"It is now twenty-one years since in May, 1889, Mr. Rockefeller made his first gift to the University of Chicago. The present gift marks, therefore, the completion of a significant period in the history of the University throughout which he has cooperated with other friends of the institution, to place it on a permanent foundation. This final gift will make the total amount which the University will have received from its Founder approximately Thirty-five Million Dollars ($35,000,000.)

"We know of no parallel in the history of educational benefaction to gifts so munificent bestowed upon a single institution of learning. But unique as they are in amount, they are still more remarkable for the spirit in which they have been bestowed. Mr. Rockefeller has never permitted the University to bear his name, and consented to be called its Founder only at the urgent request of the Board of Trustees. He has never suggested the appointment or the removal of any professor. Whatever views may have been expressed by members of the faculty, he has never indicated either assent or dissent. He has never interfered directly or indirectly, with that freedom of opinion and expression which is the vital breath of a university; but has adhered without deviation to the principle that while it is important that university professors in their conclusions be correct, it is more important that in their teaching they be free.

"More significant still: this principle has been maintained even in his attitude toward the teaching of a subject so intimate as religion, wherein the mind is keenly sensitive to differences of opinion. Although at times doctrines have been voiced in the University which traverse those the Founder is known to hold, he has never shown a desire to restrain that freedom which is quite as precious in theology as in other fields of thought.

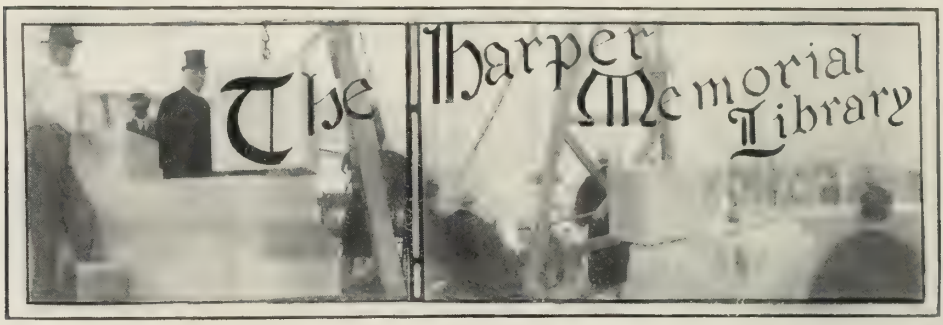


Frederick Taylor Gates

"Such a relationship between a great benefactor and the institution which he has founded affords a model for educational benefaction through all time to come.

"In contemplating the severance of this long continued relationship, so gracious on his part and rendered delightful by so many acts of personal courtesy, the Trustees are unable to express their appreciation of munificence so vast exercised in a spirit so fine.

"It is the conjunction of the act and the spirit of the act which has made it possible to create and maintain the University, and the Trustees hope that through the ages to come the University of Chicago, by training youth in character and in exact learning, and by extending the field of human knowledge, may justify all that has been done by its Founder."



SHEPLEY, RUTAN AND COOLIDGE, Architects

In the spring of 1910 ground was broken for the new Harper Memorial Library building and the corner stone was laid with impressive exercises on June 14, 1910. The construction has progressed rapidly and the elaborate stone work of this building was completed during the winter of 1910-11. The Harper Library is the largest building on the campus thus far, and is to be the central feature of the Library Group which is to extend along the Midway, completely filling the space from Ellis avenue to Lexington avenue. The Library itself with its two dominating towers, the highest point of the turrets 135 feet above the ground, occupies the center of the Group to be flanked by the Classics and Modern Language buildings on the west, and the History and Philosophy buildings on the east, with direct connections to the present Divinity and Foster halls, and with bridge connections to the Law School and Haskell Museum. When completed this Library Group will enclose three separate courts. In the center court will be erected a bronze statue of President Harper.

The Harper Library gives the University a new illustration of English Gothic architecture of the Collegiate type, inspired by the many examples of such buildings in the English university towns of Oxford and Cambridge. The Harper Library is not a copy of any particular building, but all of the features of its design have their origin in some ancient motives of this style of architecture adapted to modern conditions. The result gives an air of dignity and ancient charm to this important central building of the University.

The entrances to the library are all on the north side of the building through the two towers and central porch. The main entrance is through the West Tower, which has the preference in architectural treatment, and opens into the first floor entrance hall, the interior of which with the staircase, is finished in cut stone with heavy beamed ceilings. Adjoining the entrance hall is the President's suite of offices and the Harper Assembly Room, which is also reached through the central entrance of the building. The remaining portion of the first floor with the entire basement and second floor will eventually be filled with modern fireproof book-stack construction, providing for about forty-five thousand lineal feet of shelving. Eight electric automatic booklifts will give direct service from the stacks to the third floor, which is the main feature of the interior and provides a Reading Room of magnificent proportions 140 feet long and 53 feet wide, lined by high open bookcases below great tracery windows. The walls of this room are of Bedford limestone with a groined tiled ceiling 46 feet above the floor. At each end of this room is an arched recess with paneled stone soffit and space for large wall painting. Below this is an elaborate stone screen with balcony over.

The floor of the Reading Room will be occupied by reading tables, and in the East Tower is provided space for History and Manuscript rooms. The Towers each contain seven stories and are equipped with electric passenger elevators. The whole building is provided with a mechanical heating, ventilating, and air filtering system.

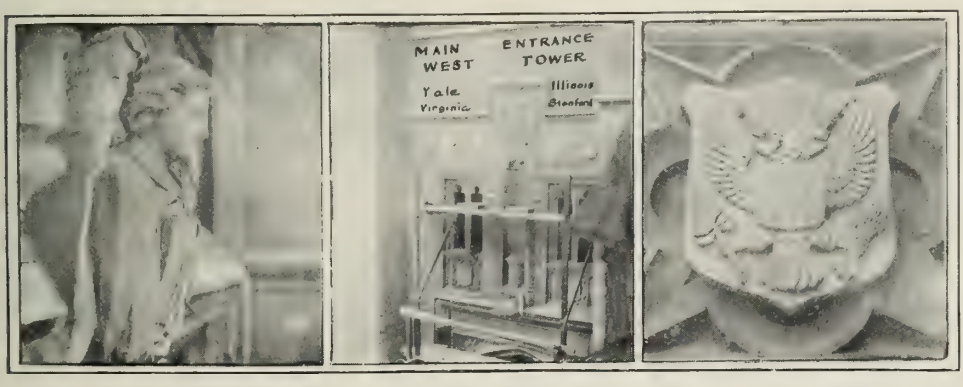
Architectual Details of the New Library

DAVID ALLAN ROBERTSON

Appreciation of the University of Chicago architecture increases greatly the happiness of living in the city grey. Most students of the University know that the Mitchell Tower is a frank adaptation of Magdalen College and that Hutchinson Hall is practically a replica of Christ Church Hall. Not so many know the prototype of the Law School to be Kings College Chapel at Cambridge and the fortress-like entrance of the Gymnasium to be suggested likewise by the gateways of the College on the Cam. Fewer still have given any heed to the details richly gracing our buildings. The lions on Mandel Hall, the bunting goats on the Gymnasium, the monkey on Hutchinson Hall, apparently annoyed by the perennial flock of red ants, the Moses on the Law Building, the shields in Hutchinson Hall, are generally not understood.

Richer interest will be taken in the William Rainey Harper Memorial Library when it is known that every detail of the building has some interesting significance. College coats of arms have been very largely used both within and without the structure. On the north elevation, over the third story windows of the west tower are the shields of Harvard, Northwestern, Indiana, Johns Hopkins, Minnesota, Michigan, and Princeton Universities; over the east tower, Wisconsin, Denison, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Vassar, and California; over the second story windows above the main entrance to the west tower, Yale University, University of Virginia, University of Illinois, and Leland Stanford Junior University; over the main entrance of the west tower, University of Chicago and the United States of America (see cut below); and on the parapet over the reading room, United States, flanked by Annapolis and West Point. On the south elevation, between the first and second story windows of the west tower, are the shields of Toronto, McGill, Williams, Bowdoin, Amherst, Brown, Dublin, and Edinburgh; over the third story window, west tower, from left to right, London, Leyden, Göttingen, Upsala, Aberdeen, Brussels, Paris, Berlin, Pisa, Leipsig, Basle, Geneva, Manchester, and Vienna; over the third story window, east tower, seven Oxford shields, and seven Cambridge shields, the shields of the two Universities in the center, New College, Christ Church, Balliol, Oxford University, Oriel, Magdalene, Trinity, Peterhouse, Pembroke, Kings, Cambridge University, Trinity, Emmanuel, St. John; and on the parapet over the central window of the reading room, the University of Chicago, in design of foliage.

Surely some of the members of the University should do for the Library, as significant decorations, what Mr. Horace Spencer Fiske, the Assistant Recorder of the University, has already done for the crockets and griffins of Hull Gate. Certainly all should know and enjoy the rich architectural embellishments of our University.



The New Ryerson Physical Laboratory

ROBERT ANDREWS MILLIKAN

MARTIN A. RYERSON

Through the generosity of the donor of the original physical laboratory, Mr. Martin A. Ryerson, the long felt and increasing need for enlarged quarters and better facilities for research work in physics is at last being met. Without in any way impairing the striking beauty of the old building as viewed from the south, an auxiliary building three stories in height and sixty feet square is now in course of erection in the space directly north of the original structure. Connection between the buildings is made on the first floor only, by means of an arched passage fifteen feet in length. The basement and first floor of the new building are to contain the machine shop, a storage-battery room, a power machinery room, and high and low temperature research rooms. On the second floor will be a small lecture room, a large laboratory for undergraduate students, and two research rooms. The entire third floor is to be one large room in which special experiments requiring large, free space, will be carried on.

Extensive changes are also to be made in the interior of the old Ryerson. The removal of all machinery to the new building will make possible much more accurate work in experiments in which the tremors of the machinery have previously interfered. The additional space afforded by the new building combined with the remodeled old one will more than double the capacity for research work as well as considerably increase the instructional facilities of the laboratory. As a result of these changes ample room is provided not only for present needs but also for future growth.

Charles Otis Whitman
Died December 6, 1910

Professor Charles Otis Whitman, head of the department of zoölogy and curator of the zoölogical museum, died of pneumonia on December 6, 1910. He was born in Woodstock, Maine, December 14, 1842. He received his A. B. degree from Bowdoin college, 1868; and A.M., from Bowdoin, 1871. He was principal of the Westford academy from 1869 to 1872; master in the English high school at Boston in 1872. He received his Ph. D., from the University of Leipsig, 1878; became a fellow in zoölogy at Johns Hopkins University, 1879; and professor of zoölogy in the Imperial University of Japan, at Tokyo, from 1880 to 1881. He was at the Naples Zoölogical station in 1882. From 1883 to 1885 he was assistant in zoölogy at Harvard University. He was director of the Allis Lake Laboratory at Milwaukee from 1886 to 1889; professor of zoölogy at Clark University from 1889 to 1892, when he came to the University of Chicago as professor and head of the zoölogical department. He was also first director of the Marine biological laboratory at Wood's Hole, Massachusetts. He received the degree of LL. D., from the University of Nebraska in 1894; Sc. D., (honorary) from Bowdoin college, 1894. He was a member of the National Academy, associate fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Science, and foreign member of the Linnaean Society. He was the chief organizer and first president of the American Society of Zoölogy, and also founder and editor of the Journal of Morphology, the Biological Bulletin, and the Biological Lectures.

He had gained extensive recognition not only for his publications, but also for his work with the Journal, in his laboratories, with his students and by his constant helpful association with other workers, and the example of his austere and studious life.

Edward Goodman
Died February 14, 1911

Edward Goodman, one of the earliest trustees of the University, died February 14, 1911, at the age of 81 years. Mr. Goodman was a trustee of the old University and had been a trustee of the University of Chicago from the time of its founding until his resignation last year because of poor health.

He was born in Northamptonshire, England, May 10, 1830, and came to Chicago in 1852. He began work here with the Standard and the Christian Times, religious papers, and later became half owner of the Christian Times, and managed the publication for fifty years. In 1854 he joined the First Baptist Church, and has been Senior deacon there since his election in 1863.

In that same year he was made treasurer of the Baptist theological Union, a position which he held until 1902. For three years he has been president of the Illinois Baptist state convention.

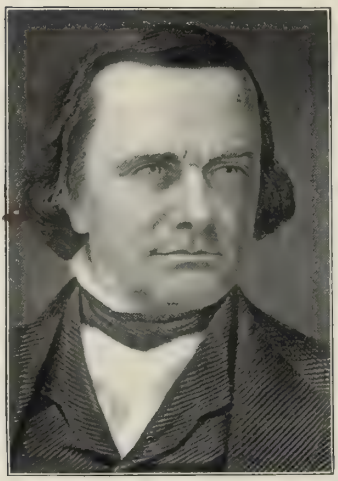
Do You Remember?



STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS

The twentieth anniversary of the founding of the University will be celebrated on June 17.

In 1855 Stephen Arnold Douglas gave ten acres of land bounded by Cottage Grove and Rhodes avenues, and college and University places, for the campus of the Old University of Chicago.

The University there opened its doors in 1857 with the Rev. John C. Burroughs as president. The Rev. Galusha Anderson was president from 1878 to 1885. In 1886 the property was seized under foreclosure proceedings by an insurance company.

1888, in the fall, Mr. John D. Rockefeller conferred with Professor William Rainey Harper of Yale, and the Rev. Fred T. Gates, secretary of the American Baptist Education Society on the subject of a new University. He promised financial support to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars. The Board meeting in December unanimously approved the report of Dr. Harper and Mr. Gates and provided for the establishment of a thoroughly equipped institution in Chicago.

1889—At the annual meeting of the Education Society held at Boston in May, resolutions for immediate action were adopted. Mr. Gates read a pledge from Mr. Rockefeller of $600,000 toward an endowment fund with the provision that $400,000 more be raised for buildings and grounds by June 1, 1890.

1890—By June 1, $402,083 had been raised. Mr. Marshall Field gave the north half of the lots bounded by Ellis and Greenwood avenues and Fifty-sixth and Fifty-ninth streets; the board purchased the south half from him. At the annual meeting of the Board of the Society in the same month articles of incorporation were drawn up. On September 10 the University was incorporated with the following trustees: E. Nelson Blake, Edward Goodmann, Hermann H. Kohlsaat, George C. Walker, William R. Harper, Andrew McLeish, Martin A. Ryerson, Henry A. Rust, Alonzo K. Parker, Joseph M. Bailey, Charles C. Bowen, Charles L. Hutchinson, Frederick A. Smith, George A. Pillsbury, Ferdinand W. Peck, Daniel L. Shorey, Francis E. Hinckley, John W. Midgley, Eli B. Felsenthal, Elmer L. Corthell, and Charles W. Needham. In the articles of incorporation are named: John D. Rockefeller, E. Nelson Blake, Marshall Field, Fred T. Gates, Francis E. Hinckley, and Thomas W. Goodspeed. The Board of Trustees of the former University authorized the board of the new institution to use the name "The University of Chicago," and changed the name of the other to "The Old University of Chicago." On account of the desire for continuity of records and the facilitation of alumni relations all books and records were turned over to the new institution. Dr. William Rainey Harper was elected president.

1891—By April 1 of this year, Dr. Harper had accepted his position as president. July 1, Professor Frank Frost Abbott of Yale was appointed University Examiner and associate professor of Latin. July 11, the Ogden (Graduate) School of Science was organized from the gift of the executors and trustees of the estate of William B. Ogden. September 18, the Board of Trustees received a pledge of $1,000,000 from Mr. Rockefeller. A committee was authorized to buy more land. Mr. Henry Ives Cobb was chosen architect. Work was begun on Haskell, Cobb, and Divinity dormitories. Ground was broken for the first building November 26. Morgan Park Academy was established, and the Baptist Union Theological Seminary was joined to the University as its divinity school. In the same year President Harper secured the large "Calvary Library" in Berlin; the faculties were organized; a chemical laboratory was donated by Mr. Sidney Kent; a museum was presented by Mr. George C. Walker; a recitation building by Mr. Cobb; and dormitories by Mrs. Elizabeth Kelly, Mrs. Nancy Foster, Mrs. Beecher, and Mrs. Snell.

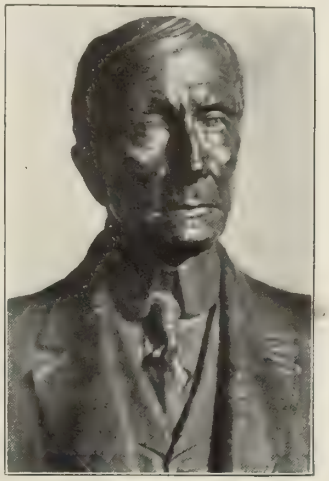
1892—October 1, the University opened its doors to students.

1895—December 14, $1,000,000 was donated by Miss Helen Culver, all to be devoted "to the increase and spread of knowledge within the field of the biological sciences."

1901—March 19, announcement was made at the convocation that the Chicago Institute, founded by Mrs. Emmons Blaine, was to become the School of Education of the University, the South Side Academy to become one of the secondary schools and to be joined with the Chicago Manuel Training School as the University high school.



JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

The decennial celebration of the founding of the University was celebrated June 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. June 15, the corner stones of the Press building and Hitchcock hall were laid, and Foster hall was formally completed. On June 16, official opening of the School of Education. June 18, occurred the laying of the corner stones of the Commons, The Tower, The Reynolds club, and Mandel hall.

Instruction in the first two years of a medical course was instituted, a medical faculty appointed, and the Freshman and Sophomore classes were transferred from Rush Medical College Work of instruction commenced in the Law School.

1906—January 10, President William Rainey Harper passed away in the fifteenth year of his administration. Harry Pratt Judson was appointed acting president.

1907—February 20, Harry Pratt Judson was elected president.

1910—Ground was broken for the new William Harper Memorial library and the addition to the Ryerson Physical laboratory.

John D. Rockefeller, by a gift of $10,000,000, severed his connection with the University.

The Alumni Council

HARRY A. HANSEN, '09

"Where, Oh where are our dear alumni?
Lost, now, in the wide, wide world."

In a nutshell it is the work of the Alumni Council to bring back the alumni to the University, and to cement the ties of friendship and loyalty which come dangerously near breaking when the members of a class leave the campus. The Council has over six thousand alumni to work with. "We cannot boast of as many oldest living alumni as other universities," said E. E. Slosson, Ph. D., '03 at the New York banquet for President Harry Pratt Judson, "But we have some of the livest living alumni in America." Hundreds of these live alumni, enrolled as members of the four alumni associations, supporting alumni projects, attending alumni meetings, encouraging every movement to bind closer the alumni and the University, are the workers who carry out the mission of the Alumni Council.

The year that ended in June, 1910, proved the most successful in the history of alumni activities. Probably more alumni joined the associations in that year than ever before. In that year, too, the Council for the first time had money with which to begin plans for new alumni clubs, solicit memberships and improve the alumni records. This last effort used up most of the surplus and together with the publication of the Alumni Directory proved the most expensive of the schemes. The promotion of alumni clubs is less expensive, much of the outlay being taken care of by local committees. A large number of letters were sent out announcing the Alumni Directory, which made its appearance on December 1, 1910. These found quick responses and within a few months 800 directories had been mailed to alumni, many of whom also subscribed for the alumni organ, the University of Chicago Magazine.

Next year is likely to see an awakening among the alumni clubs. It is hoped to begin the work with a monster reunion on the campus in June, plans for which are being considered by a committee composed of L. Brent Vaughan, '97, James W. Linn, '07, William J. McDowell, '02, William Scott Bond, '97, Harry D. Abells, '97, Dr. John E. Rhodes, '76, and Donald R. Richberg, '01. President Judson took a trip through the South in the fall or winter, during which reunions will be held. The work before the Council is limitless in extent, and every new movement opens up boundless opportunities for further alumni extension. That this field may be thoroughly covered within the next few years is the hope of the Council members.

The Chicago Alumni Club

PAUL V. HARPER, '08

STACY MOSSER

The Chicago Alumni Club was formed in 1898, one year after the graduation of the famous class of '97. The early minutes of the club show that it was the well known enthusiasm of these early graduates for the University that led them to organize the Chicago Alumni club "for the furtherance and best interests of the University of Chicago." The membership of the club was not confined to graduates but was thrown open to all who had ever been in attendance here. The main interest of the club centered quite naturally since the earliest meetings in the athletics of this university. These alumni were the foremost supporters of Mr. Stagg in his early difficulties with Michigan, Wisconsin, and Illinois. The club made their influence in athletic affairs felt more and more strongly until on December 18, 1906, the Board of Trustees ruled that the President of the University should appoint one representative of the Chicago Alumni club on the Board of Physical Culture and Athletics.

KATE B. MILLER

The club this year has held two large meetings in the College Hall of the University club, a dinner in the fall for the football team, and another in the spring for the baseball and track men. As the University ages the alumni are taking a more vital interest and a more influential place in the life of the institution. Every student who leaves Chicago this year should join hands with the Chicago Alumni club and work with it in the furtherance of its great purposes.

The Homecoming of Chicago Men

By L. Brent Vaughan, '97

On June 17 the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the University will be celebrated by the Alumni and former students. The plans to mark this event in a proper manner have been worked out by a committee of Alumni of which L. L. Vaughan, '97, is chairman. Dr. J. E. Rhodes, '76, W. S. Bond, '97, J. W. Linn, '97, H. D. Abells, '97, D. R. Richberg, '01, and W. J. McDowell, '03, are the other members of the committee.

The celebration will start Thursday evening, June 15, with the dinner given by the Athletic Department to the Order of the C. All the old stars will be invited to attend this dinner, and those who have won their C's this year will be initiated.

On Friday evening the fraternities will hold reunions, and each chapter will vie with every other chapter to have the largest percentage of its alumni and former members present. At a certain hour in the evening the chimes in Mitchell Tower will give the signal to all the fraternity men to march with lighted torches to the campus for an interfraternity sing. Each fraternity in turn will sing its favorite song, and the whole body will then join in singing all the old Chicago songs.

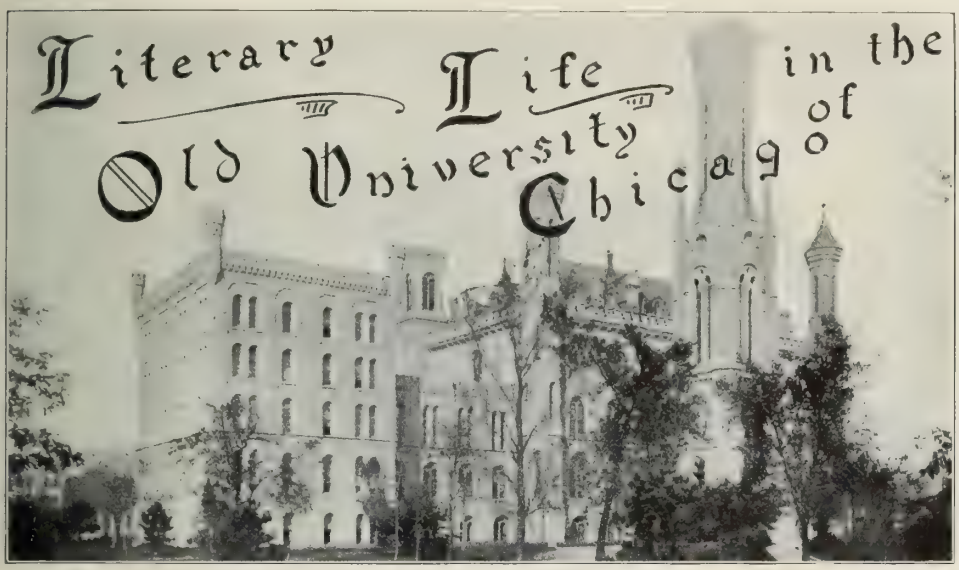
Saturday morning will be spent in various class reunions and in viewing the new buildings. A luncheon will be served at noon. The afternoon attraction will be the baseball game between Chicago and the Japanese team representing Waseda University.

At six o'clock a monster stag dinner will be served in Bartlett Gymnasium, which will be decorated for the occasion. Several short speeches will be delivered by prominent Alumni. The whole body of men, grouped in their respective classes, will appear at the dinner arrayed in the costumes which they will wear in the pageant.

The dinner will be followed by a vaudeville in Mandel hall, in which the old stars of many past performances will repeat their sketches. Stereopticon views with moving pictures will bring back many of the scenes of the early days.

As darkness settles down, to the boom of cannon and the strains of martial music, the various groups of Alumni, representing incidents in the history of Chicago and the University, will march to Marshall field for the grand pageant. The field, which will be brightly illuminated, will be thrown open to the University and the public who will have been entertained by a band concert. Many set pieces of fireworks will be displayed. A giant "C," covering half the football field, will be outlined in fire. Pictures of John D. Rockefeller, Dr. Harper, Dr. Judson, and "Old Man" Stagg will be set off, properly announced by bombs and rockets.

Thus the celebration will close, and the hundreds of loyal old Maroons, who will have seen the men of today and the great development of the University, will disband, and carry to the four corners of the land the glad tidings of Chicago.



By Eugene Parsons, '83

It is a mournful pleasure for an old timer to muse on the scenes of college days. I first set foot on the soil of the old campus at University place and Cottage Grove avenue in June, 1879, and I was a student four years; so my recollections date back two and thirty years ago. From the throng of memories more or less vivid, which rise almost unbidden, I select some relating to the literary life of the institution that once was and is no more.

The term, "literary life," like poetry and art, cannot be defined, and it needs no defining for the initiated. I remember hearing a student of the old University remark: "Harvard and Yale have more literary spirit than we have." It was true; the venerable colleges of New England had a literary atmosphere not to be found then in Chicago. There was a reason for it. In my time, 1879-83, the Windy City was not the seat of culture that it has since become. It is also to be remembered that many of the students were carrying heavy loads—they were earning money by outside work, and they lacked the leisure necessary for good writing. In my own case, I could not always do justice to lessons, let alone the preparation of articles for the college paper or essays required by our professors. It was a strenuous life that I led, rising before five o'clock in the morning and often sitting up late, from ten to twelve. But, busy as I was, I literally snatched half-hours and hours, betweenwhiles, for reading and writing. Besides, I occasionally took in a lecture or a concert when some distinguished individual like John B. Gough or Patti struck the town. On Sundays I regularly attended church, morning and evening, going to hear Dr. Lorimer, Professor Swing, or some other pulpit celebrity. As a result, there were many draughts on my time and strength. Under the circumstances, it was simply impossible for me to realize my ideals, and others were in the same boat with me.

At best the writing done by undergraduates is rather crude. Good taste is not suddenly acquired. Style is a later development. The junior or senior does not think of the felicities of expression that we admire in the well-rounded sentences of a literary artist like Macaulay or Lafcadio Hearn. It needs long practice to become skilful in handling a subject effectively. In arranging his material the collegian too frequently betrays a lack of the sense of perspective; too often he seems to be incapable of seeing the other side of a question, that is, he is narrow in his point of view. This is due to the restricted mental equipment of the young person (twenty, or about that age).

It must be granted that the essays, orations, and other writings of the students at the old University were generally commonplace performances, and sometimes the writer was unconscious of the lack of merit in the stuff that he tossed off at odd spells. There was, however, something at the old University that may, by courtesy, be called literary life. At least, we had literary societies—the Athenæum and Tri Kappa. There were such things as chapel orations, junior orations, and Commencement orations. The students got out a monthly publication, The Volante, which was fairly well edited; it sometimes contained choice contributions from Heman Sanford, John Fraser, and other professors. There were, too, prize essays, rather ambitious efforts, on such themes as "Magna Charta," "England as Reflected in Chaucer," "The Formation of the U. S. Constitution," etc. President Anderson offered fifty dollars for the best essay, and twenty-five for the one adjudged second best. These contests were open only to seniors.

Some of the pleasantest evenings I ever passed were spent in the University parlor, listening to the programs on Friday or Saturday evenings, rendered by members of the Athenæum Literary Society, of which I was a member. There was music, a piano solo or song; then came a recitation or reading of some selection in prose or verse; an original essay or speech; the reading of the paper, "The Enterprise;" last of all a debate, with singing of college songs, perhaps, after the regular program was over. Occasionally alumni would favor us with a recitation or an original production of some sort. The paper was usually the most enjoyable feature of the evening, some nonsense being mixed in with the sober reflections of the editor or editress (for the old University was a co-educational institution). Ted Hammond was the humorist of the University in the early '80's. It was no trouble for him to grind out jokes, funny stories, and humorous jingles. Some of these are still running in my head. I quote a dozen lines from memory. The piece was read on a spring evening, and was appropriate to the occasion. It began as follows:

"O fly,
That buzzest on the wall!
Take care thou dost not fall,
Thou climb'st so high.

"O fly,
Thou dost not know
What heaps of weal and woe
Thou bring'st to I.

"Whene'er I hear thy wing,
I always think of spring,
Of spring suits and straw hats,
Of pleasant moonlight chats," etc.

Some of the things heard in the literary society afterward appeared in The Volante. One poem, written by my classmate, Myra Pollard, is worth quoting in full:

ANTIGONE.

The painter forms, with touch of might,
Fair glowing shapes and visions bright;
Time quenches not their mellow light.

The poet sweeps the quivering strings,
With passion-shaken voice he sings;
Through centuries the music rings.

Antigone, thy name was sung
On Grecian shore, in Grecian tongue;
Thou livest yet, forever young.

Thy clear eyes, tranquil, undismayed,
In loyalty and honor staid,
With every glance give strength and aid.

Thou standest, scorning hate and shame.
One sound thy suffering lips can frame,
And "Duty" is the word they name.

They could not keep thee in thy grave;
As One, Who all for others gave,
Thou, too, like Him, didst die to save.

I regret that I did not save some of the verses of another member of the noble class of '83, Vance Thompson, who displayed a rare literary talent. He is now a newspaper correspondent in Paris.

Professor Stuart imported some of the customs of the Scotch universities. He delighted in Horace, and had us commit to memory a lot of Latin odes. Occasionally he gave us the task of preparing a metrical translation. The famed "Ode to Pyrrha," as Englished by Miss Pollard, he declared to be the best exercise of the kind ever turned in by a student of his. Herewith is her version, which is certainly something of an achievement for a sophomore:

"What slight youth at thy feet, Pyrrha, doth sue, I crave,
Bathed in odors so sweet, under a rose-strewn cave?
Pray, for whom is that twining,
Simple fair, of thy golden hair?

"Ah, how oft shall he weep over thy lealty changed,
Oft with shudderings deep over the gods estranged,
And, unwonted, repining,
Startled be at the wind-tossed sea.

"Golden pure dost thou seem. Trusting, he joys in thee.
Thou, he fondly doth dream, e'er for his love art free,
Not the fickle wind knowing,
Wretched they in whose luckless way.

"Thou, unproven, dost shine. Now from the sacred wall
This vowed tablet of mine, my dripping garments all,
Wreck-delivered, is showing,
Consecrate to the sea god great."

As I remember them, Class Day exercises were more interesting than Commencement programs. Among the old keepsakes in my trunk is a program containing a "Class Song," by Edward T. Stone, '82, to the popular air—"It was my last cigar." A single stanza is given:

"For four long years we've struggled hard,
Mid all the ups and downs
Which animate a college-life,
And make a brief renown.
And as our thoughts go rolling back
Upon the gladsome past,
We scarce our senses can believe,
That this day is the last.'"

There were social occasions, such as Washington's birthday banquet and receptions, which called forth toasts and music. Space is lacking for the insertion of more than two stanzas of the "Song of Chicago," written in 1883 by Mary G. Crocker, to the tune "Annie Laurie." It breathes the spirit of friendship and attachment for Alma Mater.

"Tho' sighing winds be dreary,
And night falls o'er the earth
Our college halls are cheery
With sounds of song and mirth,
With sounds of song and mirth,
For now before we part,
We meet to pledge Chicago,
The love of each fond heart.

"Then sing before we sever,
For our vacation days,
Some song of joy and gladness
In old Chicago's praise,
In old Chicago's praise,
And pledge before we part
The loyal love and honor
Of every loyal heart."

The Gifts of the Senior Classes

By S. Edwin Earle, '11

With three exceptions, the Senior classes of the University of Chicago have assumed the customary duties for which the graduating classes are usually responsible in all large educational institutions. Thus fifteen of the eighteen classes have left behind, as tokens of their appreciation of the few years spent in the University environment, structural gifts, trees, lamps, bulletin boards, and the like; or money which has been transferred to the Harper library fund.

The first three classes in the University, '93, 94, and '95, have left no gifts. Their failure to do so is due, no doubt, in part to the fact that the seniors had Alma Maters other than Chicago. Futile attempts have been made in the past year to secure gifts from these classes. However, the first class to complete four years in the University has left its memento, and the example has been followed by every class since.

The gifts in general, may be classified into three groups, the exterior, the interior, and the library. The first gift belongs to the exterior group. The class of '96 gave the oblong stone bench which lies to the right of the walk between Cobb hall and Haskell museum. It is recognized as the Senior Bench with the tradition that only seniors may sit on it. At each Spring Convocation, it is formally handed down by the graduating class to the sacred charge of the incoming seniors. The "C" Bench in front of Cobb hall, is the gift of the '03 class. It derives its name from its resemblance in shape to the college letter. Custom forbids any freshman to sit upon it, and it has become a center of undergraduate activity. In the spring and warmer weather it is used for sings, talkfests, mass meetings, and other gatherings.

The class of '98 gave the square stone drinking fountain on the north side of the walk between Cobb hall and Walker museum. About a hundred feet west of this, the class of '00 planted an elm tree and sunk a tablet nearby with its numerals inscribed. It was the first elm tree on the campus and is now the tallest of many. The class of '05 intended to buy a number of trees to be placed on each side of the walk north of Haskell Museum. A tablet near one of them was to have inscribed the name of the walk as the "Nought Five Lane." At the death of President Harper, with whom the verbal agreement was made, the plan was abandoned, because the campus beautifiers did not approve of the extra labor it thrust upon them. The money eventually was added to the library fund. The class of '06 gave the two illuminated bulletin boards in front of Cobb hall and the class of '07 two large Gothic lamps at the entrance to the same hall.

The second class began the custom of giving for interior decoration and use. This class ('97) gave the Convocation chair, which is used only by the President of the University when conferring degrees, titles, and honors at convocations. The class of '99 presented a lectern also used only at convocations.

The decennial year of the University, 1901, gave the members of the then Senior class the opportunity of honoring the founder of the old University of Chicago, Stephen A. Douglas. As a result a bust of Douglas has been placed in the cloister running south from below the Mitchell Tower. In this connection it is well to note that 1891 marks the beginning of the University, although students did not enter until October 1, 1892. In that year the charter was granted, facutly appointments were made, and graduate research work was begun. The new University is not organically connected with the old although it has adopted its graduates and cherished its history. Thus in 1901 it was fitting and proper for the Senior class to present a gift which should keep alive memories of the former institution amidst the present activities of the new university.

The stained glass window in Mandel hall nearest the platform on the east side, was presented by the class of '02. The design of five panels is significant: In the center panel is the shield of the class; on one side are the shields of Oxford and Yale; on the other, those of Cambridge and Harvard; in the lower part of each panel, intertwined with roses, (a rose was the class flower) is the name of the college or class portrayed in the panel. The class of 1904 intended to place a window next to this one, but the trustees objected on the grounds that it darkened the auditorium, and that the class funds were not sufficient to place a window of elegance, in keeping with the other furnishings. The money was then transferred to the Library fund.

The funds of five classes, '04, '05, '08, '09, '10, have been given toward the erection of the new Harper Memorial Library. Each class will be recognized by some special tablet or ornament in the building . The class of '08 has spoken for a tablet in the entrance of the library which will bear the names of all who subscribed to the library fund. The class of '09 has asked for the clock in the reading room. The other three classes are promised recognition in some form to be decided later.

Sentiment and custom have grown up and clustered around these gifts of the classes Thus whem a member of certain of them returns to the University as an alumnus, he finds that the gift of his class has become a landmark and a nucleus of student life. And he may be elated by seeing "his" chair and lecturn on the convocation platform, thrilled by the ceremonies around "his" bench as it is passed downward to the coming Seniors, or amused to see a Freshman passed over the stone side of "his" "C" bench.

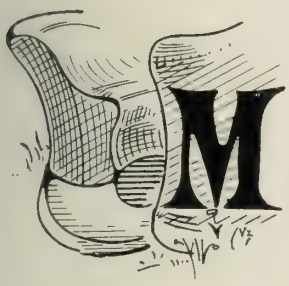
To the Class of 1914

By Coe Hayne, '00



EMBERS of the Class of 1914: we salute you! Whatever have been your employments hitherto, you have now entered an arena in which the real game is on. The ideals you cherish during your four years of studious endeavor, will be your best and most lasting. Whatever levels you reach now will read as high as any to which you will attain anywhere.

Students at the University of Chicago are ideally situated to get the far and large view of things. That a university should be placed in the heart of a great city, is a modern conception, the reasonableness of which will be tested by time. Yet it is well to remember that the conditions which are urged in favor of this expedient, may operate in defeating the end sought. It is possible for one to leave the marvelous City of Gray before a true appreciation of its magnificent environment is formed. The stimuli that make for surprise in a metropolis are so frequent and pronounced, that, like the continual beating of huge waves upon rocks, they are apt to lose their power to attract attention.

Keep fresh the sense of admiration. Amazement is fast becoming an extinct human emotion. To cease to wonder is to cease to learn. A student at the University of Chicago is surrounded by a group of buildings the importance of which, from the standpoint of architectural beauty, is recognized the world over. Within a five minutes' walk from the campus is the celebrated Field Columbian Museum, admittance to which may be gained at any time by showing the matriculation card. The City of Chicago offers the best in the way of music and art. The rapidity of Chicago's industrial development has never been equaled. In many quarters of the city there are social conditions which ought to claim the attention of every student. To become familiar with the work of the University Settlement, Hull House and Chicago Commons would in itself result in a liberal education.

By entering the University of Chicago we do not enter a cloister.

A young man living in New York, whose eyes had been troubling him, consulted an occulist.

"What you want to do," said the specialist, "is to take a trip every day on the ferry, or in New Jersey, Long Island—any place where you can see long distances. Look up and down the river, across the fields, or, if it comes to the worst, go to the top of a sky-scraper, and scan the horizon from that point. The idea is to get distance. You use your eyes a great deal and always at close range. You can't use them in any other way in town. Even when not reading and writing the vision is limited by small rooms and narrow streets. No matter in what direction you look, there is a blank wall not far away to shut off sight."

The days when a student's life was a shut-in's life are over. But in getting away from the error that a student's life should be a circumscribed life, we have fallen prey to another error. Formerly the danger was from within; now the danger is from without. Whether verity or venality will shape the thinking of tomorrow will depend largely upon the character of the students of today.

This is called the practical age.

Several months ago the steamer, "Perry G. Walker" rammed her bow through the lower gate of the Canadian locks at the Soo. Instantly there was released the tremendous power of the rapids and a big Canadian Pacific liner which had been moored within an upper lock chamber, was torn away from her moorings as her steel chains snapped like silken threads. Riding on the crest of the flood, she swept into the open reaches of the river below. During her passage downward, her cargo of iron ore shifted to one side, thus giving her a considerable list. It was only by a desperate effort on the part of the engine's crew that the big vessel was given steerageway and even then the wheelmen were obliged to battle for their lives to overcome the whirling current.

This represents in a striking way the trend of the times.

Cannot we too plainly see that our Ship of State is in danger of being swept downward in a mighty industrial current and mad rush for wealth, while at the same time carrying her load sadly and unmistakably on one side? Cannot we detect a decided list in the spirit and aims of the people? The greatest menace to the perpetuity of American ideals, is this same eagerness to turn everything to a practical account. "What will it yield in the matter of dollars and cents?" is the question too often applied to legislation, education, professional life, and even religion.

During a notable address delivered before the Alumni of the Lehigh University not long ago, George W. Wickersham, Attorney General of the United States, said:

"The best superstructure of special knowledge is built on the broad foundation of general intellectual and moral culture. In an age of great technical and industrial development, the tendency is towards pure materialism—the exalting of practical accomplishment in the production of wealth over the less tangible result of the study of history, literature, and art, and so there is on the part of many men who have attained success in business life or in the practical sciences, a disposition to extol such accomplishments beyond all others, and to undervalue or not at all to realize the value of mental culture in any other than purely technical lines. * * * Almost without exception, the great men whose names have been written large in the history of science were men of broad culture, often almost as proficient in literature and art as in science. The versatile Franklin, the all-wise Humboldt, the accomplished Bunsen and the cultured Priestly are illustrations of the fact that mere technical education alone has never secured the first rank in the life of the community."

A still higher note was struck by Prof. R. M. Wenley in his tribute to the venerable President of the University of Michigan:

"After all is said and done, human eminence roots in character, in something infinitely beyond our poor persons, in something, however, whereof a great man is the vehicle, the foretaste, the present manifestation. This world, drab enough otherwise, is a proud place because now and then men of Dr. Angell's quality relieve its common clay and evidence the victory of the inner spirit over dull, leaden circumstances, by casting a bright beam along the more excellent way."

We look out upon the world and in the glamour which surrounds the lives of those renowned by wealth and political power, our eyes are dazzled, and we call men great—great because they have triumphed over their fellows. But this is not true greatness. A man is only great who, within his own life, has conquered over self. The life conflict is within the soul itself, and not with man against man. Right here within the soul, the powers of good and evil marshal their forces for a final conflict. As good, the truer self, conquers, does man reach his highest goal.

Members of the class of 1914: the world is yours. It will make of you just what you make of the world. The doors of life's workshop are open—now. It is yours to enter and work out your own personality; to emerge from the clouds that may enshroud your lives and become the masters upon the open sea. If, during your university course, you draw up the plans for the great campaign of life, your university life will be grandly successful.

The American of today has a work to do. A work of such a character as no previous age has offered. The young man or the young woman of today has a large place to fill in the world's operations. Whether America shall still hold up before the world, untarnished, the great republican ideal, depends upon the quality of its young men and young women today. It is not ours to look back upon other days and long for the opportunities of the past. Nobler and higher are the opportunities of today. The world has need of the man who has made himself free; who has given to his mind and body that discipline which makes for true manhood. On the one hand with a power of discerning higher levels not yet attained, and on the other with a heart ready to respond to those heavenly visions; a will powerful to control and direct every impulse of the heart, and with a God in heaven to help you—these are the resources at your command to work out your own salvation.

The University Color and Yell

By Frederick D. Nichols, '97

The selection of the University Color was the occasion of one of the most exciting series of student meetings that marked the significant days of '93 and '94. It was only after nearly two years of discussion, reconsidering, and redeciding, that the Maroon won complete supremacy.

In the winter of '93, at about the time the "Go-Chicaw" yell was adopted, a color was first suggested, hurriedly and with little or no publicity. It did not reach the consciousness of the student body until it was introduced in the uniforms of the first baseball team of the University. However, when the boxes and bundles were opened in the presence of the expectant players, the realization that a color had been adopted was keen enough to more than make up for the earlier indifference. YELLOW stockings and a YELLOW "C" on the Chicago-gray uniforms! And such a yellow!

At the first glimpse of this abomination, the players gave forth a groan of pain and derision that fairly stirred the keel of the sub-marined "Old Gym." Some hinted that Mr. Stagg (not then called the "old man") was responsible; others suggested that the young women of the University had tried to perpetuate the shade of yellow at that time the prevailing color for evening wear. However that may be, the "Yellow Streak" appeared at practice that day; but the activities of the players consisted largely of ironical dancing characterized by pretentious displays of very yellow hosiery. During the rest of the spring and the football season of '93, plain black served as a substitute for a color. Yellow was out of the question.

Late in the following winter, '94, the color question was again taken up; this time in earnest. Many meetings of the student body were called;but the free-for-all discussions ended each day in dissension. Two fundamental ideas, however prevailed; that there should be but a single color and that it should if possible be unique.

Finally, at the end of a boisterous session, one named Henry Love Clarke secured a hearing. Under some unusual inspiration, he drew from the sunset skies their most glorious tints, blended them all into one transcendant color, and in a burst of enthusiasm proclaimed his undying allegiance to "that adornment of Cardinals and Kings,"—SCARLET. The impetus of his appeal was irresistible. Scarlet was straightway adopted by a vote so loud and so nearly unanimous that the jeering of a few athletes passed unnoticed. And Scarlet was then solemnly accepted by the Faculty as the official University Color.

But this was not the end. Many of the men on the teams disliked the color for use on the athletic field. A self-appointed committee, consisting of the captains of the three teams, called a conference of representative members of the student body. An exhaustive study of the whole subject was at once begun. On investigation it was quickly found that Scarlet was used by more than a score of bucolic colleges in the Middle West; and that there were many unfortunate connotations of the word. Then a careful analysis was made of the colors of all the colleges of America. One color alone was found to be sufficiently unique; and it also fulfilled every other requirement for a University Color; it was attractive in itself; was adapted to every kind of decoration and was in commercial use the world over. Fabrics were secured and tested, and the most practical and desirable shade was tentatively chosen.

Then a petition was circulated informally, and the consent of President Harper was secured for a final reconsidering of the color question. At a meeting called for the rehearing, practically the whole University population was present. For the first time, the subject was presented and discussed with all the essential facts in hand. The result was the unanimous adoption of Maroon, the exact shade being represented by samples of silk and other fabrics, and to be known as "Chicago-Maroon," differing decidedly from ordinary reds, crimsons, and less desirable shades of Maroon. The decision of the student body was accepted by the officers of the University, and the short regimes of Yellow and Scarlet were quickly forgotten.

I should very much like to add a moral to my story of the Maroon. It would be to the effect that if the same care and consideration had been used in early '93 in the adoption of the college cheer, the present "Go-Chicaw" yell would never have made its way. It was suggested and adopted hurriedly, and there was by no means a large representative body of students at the meetings which discussed the subject of yells. Unlike the color, however, the Chicago yell adopted was in constant use and soon became the standard cheer. To my knowledge, the majority of the athletes of those days, including Mr. Stagg himself, did not like the yell, but we all put up with it largely through indifference. Moreover, it was fairly well adapted to the small crowds of those days, and without a united effort no suggestion was made to get something more desirable and permanent.

I should like very much to see this subject of a college cheer given the consideration it deserves; three "Chicagos," seven or nine "rahs," and three "Chicagos," if properly cheered, would make a dignified and effective University yell, which would make the present undignified "Go-Cicaw" sound at provincial as it really is. If our student body could hear the "Chicaw" yell given at Harvard or Yale, there would be a burning desire to sink it in the sea without delay. The sentimental comments that the Chicago yell has been established and should be maintained, is based on sentiment alone. On examination one will find that the present cheers of Yale and Harvard, for example, are comparatively modern, and that these institutions have changed their cheer many times in an effort to get something permanent. Only in modern days have they been successful in obtaining something that seems to be permanent.

I trust you will pardon my comments on this subject if they are not in harmony with your own views. Down in my heart I feel that it can be only a question of time before the University members see the present provincialism that sticks out all over the present "Chicaw," to say nothing of it impracticability.

The Class of 1911

Ever and ever so long ago—or was it only four years?—a great, incoherent, ununified, unemphatic body of Freshmen stumbled into Kent theater to receive its first instructions on how to become a class—a coherent, unified, and emphatic class. True, we did not care for the guidance of a representative of the Sophomore class on that occasion, but we put up with it and elected our first officers, with whose help we soon learned to do without the aid of the Sophomores.

Many things have happened since that time—many other lessons have had to be learned and some have had to be unlearned, for we have had to forget all we ever knew about Literature college dances, the Sock and Buskin plays, the garden parties of Arts, and the lunches of Science. These were the antedeluvian days when the honor point was one of Dean Lovett's "unconceived conceptions"—the days when one's faith in "cons" and "cut minor" was still unshaken."

But our history is not all ancient, in fact it is modern and up-to-date in every sense of the words. Of course we do not claim that mustaches are entirely a creation of modern science, but we do claim that our use of them is a trifle novel. What institution other than our dignified class, urged on, we admit, by the enthusiastic advertising of the Daily Maroon, could have thought of so many ingenious ways of wearing these adornments, or could have given tank parties and cups in their honor?

Who but our own original entertainment committee could have devised a dance at which, in unoccupied intervals, one could vote on everything from the most scholastic to the most fastidious member of the class, followed by a dinner, the menu of which resembled a playbil in all particulars? Was it not we who conceived the idea, perhaps not new elsewhere, of having a Senior Prom, and did we not prove its superiority over "Washington Proms" of former years, by making it the "biggest and best" in the history of the University?

And yet, however great may be our pride in these achievements of the class, we do not for one moment forget those other and more lasting achievements which have been accomplished in our time. For we have seen the dedication and near completion of that tribute to our great ex-president—the Harper Memorial library. It has been in our history that Mr. Rockefeller has made his last and greatest gift to the University. We have also lived to see the realization of that distant vision—the adoption of an official University seal.

And the end is not yet, for long after this volume has gone to press the Senior class will still be winning glory, for seldom in the history of any class has there been such a graduation as ours will be. "The first annual home-coming" and "the Alumni pageant" are words full of meaning—words which can in one sense convey the picture of students of former classes, students who graduated one, two, and even ten years ago in caps and gowns or in historical and symbolic costume, uniting with the class of 1911 in one great reunion. Truly ours is a happy class to have lived to see this day.

The Book of the Class of 1912

1. And it came to pass, in the Year of Our Lord, nineteen hundred and eight, in the days of the time of Harvest, that an unrest fell upon divers youth of the Land.

2. So that some of them said: Lo, we have fulfilled our days in the school which is called High, and behold, it is decreed that we must imbibe the Education surnamed Higher. And they waxed exceeding Wroth.

3. But others leapt and clapped their hands with joy; so that those that dwelt near them looked askance at them and said:

4. Why dost thou leap like young fawns in the watered plains? Why rendest thou mine ears with shouting?

5. And one answering said: I go to that city called Chicago, which, being interpreted is called The Metropolis of Wisdom.

6. There I shall become a mighty athlete, mighty upon the field of contest.

7. And another replied: Lo, my learning hath brought me fame, even in the School called High, and I journey to Chicago that I may carry off the spoils of Wisdom, even the Key of Knowledge.*

8. And sundry Virgins cast down their eyes and murmured: We too are pilgrims to the same City, that we may sojourn within its walls.

9. And verily, the men thereof are Grand.

10. So was it, that they gathered together within the walls of the City.

11. And their nations were many. From the West and the South came they; from the East and the North they turned their steps.

*Greek Φ B K.

12. And they knew not one another, and they were afraid. They cast suspicious glances the one upon the other.

13. So that when the Inhabitants of the City beheld, they said Truly, they have not been long from the tents of their fathers nor have they been continually absent from the strings of their mother's garment.* Let it be that their tribe be called Fresh.

14. So it was decreed; and they continued for a year.†

CHAPTER II.

1. In the Time when the Grain was again Ripe for the Reaper, and when the days of the shaded Piazza and the moonlight Wandering had passed, the tribe called Fresh returned again to the dwellings of the Wise.‡

2. And they met with much laughing and clasping of Hands.

3. Behold the maidens kissed one another with Rapture.

4. And their words had all the same sound: Didst thou have the Time that is called Good? Dost thou remember? Hast thou forgot?

5. What is thy course, O Brother?

6. And they laughed so that the tears ran down their cheeks, saying:

7. How great our Fears! How overwhelming our ignorance! How manifold our Mistakes aforetimes!

8. But our knowledge is exceeding great, and our courage is boundless.§

9. So that the old men of the City have said, aye, the elders have decreed that no longer shall we be known to the Children of Men as Fresh; but our name shall be called Sophomore.§

10. And they did sing a song celebrating the Glory of their Tribe:

11. Behold! We have come out of the cloud of fear which did obscure us. Lo! We have cast the mantle of doubt from off our shoulders.

12. Upright we stand; bold is our front. For who can surpass us? Who can gain the victory over us?

13. Look ye upon our mighty athletes who fight upon the field of battle. Who is braver than "Skee." Who is more steadfast than Menaul?

14. Who is of greater gracefulness in the dance than Lorraine? Who playeth more loudly upon the harp than Dusty Stapp?

15. Is there any among maidens who is more Sought after than 'Slee? Who among the youths weareth his mantle with better grace than Al Heath? Who drapeth his tunic to better advantage?

16. We have risen from the Depths and the kingdoms of the earth lie green before us.

CHAPTER III.

1. When again the rolling months brought round the Harvest, and the

Matrons of the land said one to another:

2. Is thy new robe exceeding tight? Shalt have thy last Year's mantle cut Short? Alas! The moth hath corrupted the wolf skins which did keep me warm.

3. Then they that were hight Sophomores did again up and away.

4. They have left the tents of their mothers who say: He that is gone is mighty in wisdom. Great are his trophies of Learning.*

*Honor points

5. They have quitted the abodes of their fathers who listen to the tales of them that are their wives and say after the manner of speech of the unbeliever: Huh!†

†trans. "Show me"

6. They have come again to the City of Wisdom beside the waters of an azure sea.

7. And forsooth, their name is called Junior§ and they are as another tribe.

§trans. one without seans

8. For they neither cower down in fear nor do they vaunt unseemly boastings.

9. But their ways are full of moderation: their paths are straight and narrow.

10. They say of this man: Lo, he is my brother; for he is of the tribe called Junior. And they are Faithful the one to the other.

11. Two prophets lead them, the greater, Raymond Daly, and the lesser, William Harms.

12. And a woman of prudence and good wisdom is their Scribe. And her name is called Ellen MacNeish.

13. And the guardian of their much gold and abundant treasure is known throughout the land as Ralph Rosenthal.

14. And the tribe prospereth in the eyes of men; for its councils they are just. Selah.

The Class of 1913

"Where, Oh, where
Is the gay young Sophomore?"

You may see him on gridiron, diamond or track; you may peep into the sanctum of The Maroon and spy him there; you will dance with him at the Prom; you will find him in your classes, (particularly if they meet but four times a week). It has not taken long for the members of the class of 1913 to penetrate into every crevice of University life. Some, alas, have penetrated through sundry crevices and are finding more credit in pursuit of the elusive dollar than they found in the pursuit of the still more elusive honor point. But that is another story.

Besides his facility for making every interest in college life his own, the 1913 student has been characterized by class devotion. Witness the jaunty Sophomore toque with its much maligned "Dandelion" marking the wearer as a man of loyalty, not to say bravery!

His class has been a point of pride to the 1913 fellow or girl, with the result that he has made his class affairs matters of history. Of course, this has been somewhat due to the officers whom he has carefully selected, with an idea, popular opinion to the contrary, of something more than the color of hair.

Such class affairs as they were, too! Who that participated will ever forget the dances at the Reynolds club, wherein every other dance was a "robber" dance? Or the dance in the Washington Park Refrectory, where the sylvan beauty was somewhat marred by the dripping rain, but the happiness of the dancers not a bit? Or the Freshman play, that set a precedent and innocently combined vaudeville, tragedy and farce in a fearful and wonderful manner?

Here, then, you will find the Sophomore, about to take his Associate title and to step timidly into the upper classes. He may find more of knowledge, but cannot find more of pleasure.

From the beginning it has been felt that the class of 1914 was bound to succeed, because of the bands of friendship and spirit which have bound its members together, and because of their great enthusiasm. After a meeting held early in the spring quarter for the nomination of officers the class immediately became eager to make of itself a real unit in the University. As a result of the elections held soon after, Dana Morrison was made president; Melville R. Dall, vice-president; Ruth Agar, secretary; and Erling H. Lunde, treasurer.

These officers, aided by competent members of the several committees, arranged the program for the quarter. On December 9 an informal dance was given in the Reynolds' Club. Each dancer wore a tag bearing his or her name and, as a consequence, introductions were dispensed with. A county fair, given in the Lexington gymnasium December 10, was a great success. Only girls were present, and these, dressed in farmers' costumes, were served red-hots, pop-corn, and cider. Examinations loomed up near Christmas time as dark and deadly destroyers, but the class marched bravely through them, and has emerged almost whole to begin the new quarter.

In the winter quarter the committees again became busy with the social program. Another informal dance was held in the Reynold's Club, January 13. Here all the members of the class met again, but now as old friends. Other dances and a play have been arranged.

In the matter of athletics, the class has furnished many "stars." The football team was made up of excellent material and did splendid work against the Varsity in practice. The class basketball team stands at the head of the inter-class league. The baseball men have gone out for practice and promise well. The track men, also, have great possibilities.

Nineteen-fourteen has representatives in every student activily which is open to it, in music and dramatic clubs, literary and debating societies, and in the University publication work. In fact there is no limit to its ambitions for the Universtiy.

The Undergraduate Council

The term of the first Undergraduate Council under the new system expired in February 1911. The council consisting of Hazel Stillman, President, Nathaniel Pfeffer, Reno R. Reeve, Vallee O. Appel, Benton Moyer, Richard Teichgraeber, Raymond Daly, secretary, Margaret Mitchell, Kent Chandler, James Donovan, and Dana Morrison, completed a very successful year, in which they handled all matters of general student interest to the satisfaction of everyone.

Two acts of the Council are worth noting. One was the sending to Mr. Rockefeller of a leather-bound set of resolutions thanking him in behalf of the Undergraduates for his last splendid gift to the University. The second was the present to Dean Vincent of a similar token from the student body in appreciation of his ever willingness to cooperate with them in University affairs.

The custom of a dinner every year to the members of the Council, active and retired, was established.

The present Council consists of Hazel Leigh Stillman, President; Nathaniel Pfeffer, Reno R. Reeve, Vallee O. Appel, for the Upper Seniors; Robert Baird, Adelaide Roe, William Warriner, Raymond Daly, Secretary, for the Lower Seniors; James Donovan, George Kuh and Cora Hinkins for the Upper Juniors; Earnest Reichman, Leonard Neighbour, and Dana Morrison for the Lower Juniors.

James Donovan and Cora Hinkins were elected President and Secretary of the Junior Council to succeed Kent Chandler and Margaret Mitchell.

ORGANIZATIONS

Reynolds Club

At the annual meeting of March 4, 1910, there were elected the following officers: Charles Lee Sullivan, president; Roy Baldridge, vice-president; Frank Collings, secretary; Hume C. Young, treasurer; and the E. H. Bowlby, librarian. Owing to the fact that Mr. Sullivan did not return to college in the fall, Roy Baldridge was elected as president by the executive council to fill the vacancy; and when Mr. Young left college in the Winter Quarter, the executive council elected William Pyraemus Harms to fill that office, and Walter Phillips Comstock to the office of vice-president.

The year has been marked by important improvements in the Club House. In the first floor reading room three handsome rugs entirely covering the floor and making for a better dancing surface have been installed; while the old maroon rug was remodeled for the small second floor rooms. In the bowling alleys new balls and pins were added before the annual tournament took place. In addition to improvements of a less important nature, the writing room has been entirely refitted with tables, chairs, and convenient auxiliaries.

The Club has gained a distinct reputation for its smokers especially. These occasions are worth much to the men of the University in bringing them all together in friendliness. Local talent has been used exclusively, unique stunts have been prepared, and printed programs of executive-council wit have been instituted. The annual Hard Times party was a greater success than ever, the costumes being more artistic and better thought out than ever before. The usual President's Reception and the Formal were also held. As for the informal dances, they have been so popular that the bowling alleys in the basement have been thrown open for free bowling during their progress in order that the crowded conditions of the upper two floors might be relieved.

The 1911 Cap and Gown

As the 1910-1911 administration of officers retired they issued a booklet of the Constitution, revised House Rules, and a History of the Club, which was illustrated by photographs. As well as being distributed to Club members this booklet was sent out to other Universities and Colleges.

For the first time in its history, the Pen Club, that organization of future literati, has this year been compelled to turn away guests at its periodic dinners. Whether this has been due to an unusual interest in the club or to the popularity of the men who have been its guests of honor, at any rate the Pen Club has found it necessary to place a limitation upon its membership so popular have its dinners become. The transformation of the club from a looose, open organization into practically an honor society, has met with complete success.

Among the successful men of the literary and journalistic world to whom dinners have been given in the past year were Edwin L. Shuman, literary critic and author of many books on journalism; Bert Leston Taylor, humorist and author of "A -Line-O-Type-or-Two," and George Fitch, humorist and writer of college stories.

The Japanese Club

Since the establishment of the Japanese Club of the University of Chicago, the primary purpose of the Club has been the report and discussion of the results of scientific investigations in various branches of learning as represented by the members. This is done at the regular meeting of the Club held on the first Saturday night of every month, during the academic year. These meetings are all conducted in Japanese, and therefore accessible only to the Japanese speaking students. But in order to fulfill the larger social function of the Club, an annual entertainment of some kind is held to which all members and friends of the University are invited. During the year 1910-1911, the Club gave the "Japanese Night" under the auspices of the Cosmopolitan Club of the University at which an attempt was made to reproduce manners and customs of the Japanese before the American audience. The Club has at present eighteen members of which three are honorary:

With thirty-seven of its members fresh from the Summer Conference at Lake Geneva, the Young Woman's Christian League began its new year in October with enthusiasm. As soon as the deans opened their offices, the hospitable league room in Lexington hall was thrown wide open, and all women students, new and old, were bidden to enter. Within there were little maroon covered hand books, full of just the kind of information which the Freshman wants; older girls always ready to give help in the puzzling problems of registration; cheering cups of tea; and always a warm welcome for all.

On the first Friday evening of the autumn quarter the League gave a dinner to the new students at which three hundred and twenty-one women were present. This was followed by the Freshman Frolic, which was, as always, much enjoyed. By this time the new students were beginning to feel at home in their great University, and the League already numbered many of them among its loyal friends and workers. In all its nineteen years of existence, the League has never met with a warmer response to its welcome to the Freshmen than it received this year, and it looks forward to greater achievements than ever before now that it has the sympathy and support of so many of the class of 1914.

The autumn quarter was a very busy one for all the committees of the League. Bible and Mission Study classes were formed; religious meetings were held each Wednesday morning; workers were found in the University Settlement, Hull House, and Hyde Park Center; a delegation was sent to the state convention of the Young Women's Christian Association of Illinois; receptions and more informal good times were given; and many of the new members were assigned to the committees for which they seemed especially fitted. On Thanksgiving day members of the League carried two hundred and fifty bags of fruit, candy, nuts, etc., to the Home for Incurables, leaving one with each patient, and at Christmas time the hearts of over one hundred children were made glad by the well filled stockings which the University girls had prepared for them.

To the women of the University the League extends most cordial greetings. Its doors are ever open to all of them, students and faculty, undergraduates and graduates, members of the School of Education and the school on the quadrangle. It earnestly invites the cooperation and help of all who sympathize with its purpose to develop and express the Christian life.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD CLUBS

There are four Neighborhood Clubs at the University, and their aim is to promote social intercourse among the off-campus women. Every University woman may, if she wants to belong to one of these clubs, and it is hoped that in the not very distant future every University woman will belong to one of them.

The division into four clubs is made on a territorial basis, the dividing lines being the Midway between the North and South, and Lexington avenue between the East and West, clubs.

In Lexington hall the Neighborhood clubs have an attractive room, which is meant to be, as Miss Robinson, the founder of the clubs, says: "The campus home of the off-campus girl," where she may rest, or study, or talk to her friends. Several times in each quarter each club has a party for its members in the Neighborhood room, or at the home of one of the women. Usually the clubs have at least one social affair in common in the quarter. In the Spring of 1910 there was Mrs. Vincent's reception for the four clubs; in the Autumn Mrs. Judson's reception, and the Thanksgiving spread; in the Spring of 1911 the party for members of the University faculty.

Le Cercle Francaise

This is the second year of the French club's life and both have proved equally successful.

In 1909-10 the students of French met every week to practice what they had studied so well. In April, to show how great was their fluency, they gave a delightful reception, and a play, "La Lettre Chargée, most cleverly rendered by the Misses Slaught, Hostetter, Borell, and Quayle, several other members of the club dancing and singing peasant songs and dances.

The year 1910-11 has not been less interesting. Besides receiving the visit of members of the Faculty, the Faculty club is endeavoring to prove a really French organization, with one chief aim, a better acquaintance with all things French. It is not one more class, but a pleasant gathering with songs and conversation.

The committee in charge for this year is as follows:

MISS ISABEL JARVIS . . . . . President
MISS INA PEREGO . . . . . Vice-President
MISS FLORENCE KNIGHT . . . . . Treasurer
MLLE. SUZ. MORIN . . . . . Secretary

The German Club

The meetings of the German Club are held every Friday afternoon in Lexington hall, for the purpose of teaching the students of the university conversational German. An opportunity is also given for the students to become better acquainted with German life and culture. For five years the club has been under the leadership of Dr. Hans Gronow and he and Mrs. Gronow conduct the conversation classes.

On April 26, 1910, the club gave the play "Ultimo," a comedy by Benedix.

On May 5, 1911, were given Geburtstags-Freuden by Hans Arnold, and Als Verlobte Empfehlen Sich by Ernst Wichert.

In October, 1909, a group of enthusiastic women met in the Union room in Lexington hall to form a literary society. No such organization existed at that time among the women, and about twenty replied to the call of the modest little notice posted on the Cobb bulletin board. Before the Autumn quarter was over, we had drawn up a constitution, and under the name of "The Short Story Club," we became an accredited organization with Clara Alexander as president.

"To give its members a better understanding of the technique of the short story, a broader appreciation of its value as a form of literature, and an opportunity for original work in the short story writing," was the aim which the little circle set itself. Meeting informally, we studied examples from Kipling, Bret Harte, Stevenson, Henry James, Aldrich, and others; and we listened to the delightful secrets of marketing short stories as revealed by Dean James Weber Linn, and to an illuminating address by Professor Robert Herrick, and to the helpful advice and experiences of Miss Maddox—a newspaper woman of much ability. We even made a few attempts at original work, and so the year ended.

At the beginning of this year we took up our work again under the chairmanship of Marguerite Swawite. Among our speakers, we have had Miss Ethel Colson of the Record-Herald; and in the near future we shall have as our guests Mrs. Louis Betts, wife of the well known portrait painter, and Mrs. Maude Radford Warren. The most important task we have set ourselves to accomplish this year is the writing of a short story for publication by each member of the club.

DAVENPORT CLUB

The only city represented by a club in the University of Chicago is Davenport, Iowa. The members of the club are those students in the University who are from that city. The Aero Club was founded early in the Spring of 1910 with a limited membership of twenty-five. Activity was begun with the purchase and study of several small gliders after a deliberate study of which, the club purchased one of the Demoiselle type. Preparations were made for demonstrations on a track fastened to the bleachers of Marshall field, but the quarter ended before the plans materialized. On account of the inclemency of the autumn and winter weather, the club ceased activities with the intention of starting again in the spring. Mr. George Barker of the Curtis school has been the coach and adviser of the club.

CONVOCATION 1910

ORATORY

DEBATE TEAM

Chicago's debaters for 1910-11 figured in a triple tie with Michigan and Northwestern for honors in the Central Debating League. Each affirmative team won, and, necessarily, each negative team lost. This parallels the result two years ago, except for the fact that the negative was victorious at that time. As Chicago won the championship last year, the present tie leaves us still technical champions of the league. The score now stands thus:

	Michigan		Chicago		Northwestern
	Won	Lost	Won	Lost	Won	Lost
1907	2	0	0	2	1	1
1908	2	0	1	1	0	2
1909	1	1	1	1	1	1
1910	1	1	2	0	0	2
1911	1	1	1	1	1	1
Totals	7	3	5	5	3	7

The question for this year's debate was: "Resolved, That the Federal Government Should Levy a Graduated Income Tax, Constitutionality Conceded."

The affirmative team met Northwestern's negative team in Mandel Hall on the night of January 20, 1911. Dean James P. Hall, of the law school, presided. The speakers for Chicago were Edward E. Jennings, '12; Lew McDonald, Law '12; and Paul M. O'Dea, Law '13. Their opponents were Jay L. Chestnutt, O. E. Reinhart, and Raymond Pruitt. In the rebuttal speeches Northwestern kept the same order, while for Chicago, Mr. O'Dea spoke second and Mr. McDonald last. The judges were Judge Edward O. Brown of the Appellate Court of Illinois, Professor John M. Clapp of Lake Forest University, and the Hon. S. S. Gregory of Chicago. Their verdict was unanimous for Chicago.

The negative team went to Michigan and battled against the Michigan affirmative in University hall at Ann Arbor. Governor Chase M. Osborne of Michigan, presided, and while waiting for the judges' decision he appealed to the debaters to use their oratorical powers in behalf of the reform measures now before the people. The Chicago speakers were Merrill I. Scnebly, '11, Law '13; Albert F. Mecklenburger, Law '11; and Arthur P. Scott, graduate student in history. Michigan's debaters were John Gutknecht, Benjamin H. Reck, and Robert J. Curry. In rebuttal the Chicago order remained the same, but each Michigan man took a different place. Mr. Reck spoke first, Mr. Curry second, and Mr. Gutknecht third. The judges were ex-attorney general Frank S. Monnett, of Columbus, Ohio; Hon. Charles F. Coffin, of Indianapolis, Ind., and the Hon. Jackson W. Sparrow, of Cincinnati, O. They gave a solid vote for Michigan.

The University of Chicago Magazine

Published by
The University of Chicago
Alumni Association

One of the mediums for communciation among alumni is the University of Chicago Magazine, which publishes accounts of alumni meetings, articles and addresses by members of the University faculty and alumni, and personal news notes prepared by the secretaries of the Association of Doctors of Philosophy, the Law School Association, the Divinity Alumni Association, and the College Alumni Association. For this reason, perhaps, alumni are generous in its support. During 1909-10 nearly 700 names were added to its subscription list by the associations, all of these representing memberships. At the same time the Magazine went to a large part of the University faculty, and students in and out of residence, its circulation surpassing all estimates at the end of the year by several hundred.

The alumni part of the Magazine has been edited for the last two years by Harry A. Hansen, '09, while University articles, reports of convocations and the record of University work have been prepared by Horace S. Fiske, assistant recorder of the University. Since October, 1910, the Magazine has published articles and illustrations that have been especially noteworthy from a historical standpoint. The contributors have included President Judson, Professor Charles Otis Whitman, Professor Frank R. Lillie, Professor Robert A. Millikan, Associate Professor Wallace W. Atwood, and others, while the convocation addresses of Professor Roscoe Pound and President Albert Ross Hill have been printed in their entirety. The frontispiece of the January, 1911, number showing the bust of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, was most successful from an artistic standpoint, although in printing the illustrations an unusually high standard has been maintained.

Harold Kramer,'13, and Nat Rubinkam,'10, have assisted this year in preparing material for the Magazine and in working in the Magazine office. Kramer has had charge of the Undergraduate Life department. This department gives a careful, accurate, and entertaining review of the undergraduate work of the past month. It serves to recall to the alumnus his own days in college, and to give the student a record of happenings of the present time.

The Magazine presents the unusual feature of carrying no advertising. For the last two years its expenses have been provided for by an appropriation from the University, which will help the Magazine until such a time as it shall become strong enough to stand on its own resources. The encouraging growth of alumni and student interest in the enterprise leads its editors to hope that the time for its further expansion and development is not far off.

The Daily Maroon

VOL. VIII—No. 117. UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO, 1909-1910 PRICE, 5 CENTS

Although hampered by greater mechanical difficulties than the previous year, and compelled by the failure of its business manager to swap horses in the middle of the stream and elect another at the beginning of the fall quarter, The Daily Maroon has nevertheless gone one step further towards the realization of its ideal—a perfect college paper. With Nathaniel Pfeffer as managing editor, Raymond J. Daly as news editor, and Millington F. Carpenter as athletic editor, complete harmony has reigned in the editorial department; and with Ben F. Newman as business manager, the finances of the paper have been well taken care of despite the late start. A competent staff of associate editors, reporters and advertising solicitors has made the remaining contribution to the success of The Daily Maroon for 1910-1911.

By the establishment of its Women's department, the Gargoylette column and the Social Calendar, The Daily Maroon has sought to broaden its field and to represent more thoroughly all sides of student life. The Women's department, with Miss Marjorie Hill as editor, Miss Ruth Reticker as associate editor, and an office in Lexington hall, has been even a greater success than had been expected. The women's activities have had fairer, greater, and more accurate representation than ever before and the Women's department has now evoked from an experiment to a permanent part of the paper. The Garoylette column and the Social Calendar have also tended toward greater student interest in the paper, although their progress has been more gradual than the Women's department.

To take a more positive and vigorous stand in questions of undergraduate life and interests; to pierce beneath the surface of the University atmosphere; to speak with frankness, honesty and fearlessness; this has been the policy of The Daily Maroon. Believing that it is the function of a college newspaper to mould as well as to reflect student opinion, it has stood for certain standards, principles and ideals. With the highest interests of the University always at heart, it has at times departed from collegiate conventions in its editorial expressions to further those standards, principles and ideals. And in this way provoking intelligent thought and discussion on college problems, it has sought to make itself a more positive, vital force in the University community, and to make its contribution to the glorification of Alma Mater.

THE SOCIAL CALENDAR

Those of us who think we are old, because our memory extends back of a college generation; who feel sophisticated, because it has been our fortune, good or ill, to see more musical comedies than the Freshman, and who look on anything not of our day as newer, and therefore inferior; we, who assert that the Lyrical Liar was better than the Double Eagle; that the Kings Kalender Keeper was far superior to the Rushing of Raxes, and that the Pasing of Pahli Khan was the sum total, the acme of perfection, the ne plus ultra of all Blackfriar comedies—come back year after year to defend our conviction that Blackfriar plays have lost none of their wit, satire and power to entertain.

If anyone sighed on those memorable nights, May 19 and 20, 1910, when "The Pseudo-Suffragettes" became history, no one told; if anyone wept it is not recorded. The Friars and their friends came "to laugh, to chaff." For this purpose Ben Newman had provided the book, which was considered a very good book, as books go, being composed of about 200 pages, neatly typewritten and bound with ribbons of the colors of Ben's fraternity. Our author was eminently fitted to write this book, having pursued a successful business career while in the University, and having read much in "System" and "The Business Philosopher." The book might be described as topical, satirical and full of local color. The local color was helped along by a new back drop, which evoked many "Oh's!" from the audience, when they saw that the scene painter, with his eyes shut, had nearly reproduced the University on canvas. The lyrics by Bernard I. Bell, who has given long, devoted service to the Blackfriars, were better than most of those of days gone by because they had rhythm and point, and moreover rhymed—some said on both ends. Earle Bowlby's score proved tuneful and original, and his "Just You and I" and "Leonore" far better than the current professional output.

Calvin O. Smith as Peter Schmidt

William F. Merrill as Sallie Smart

Frank G. Parker as Samantha Jinks

Doubtless every Friar who has ever worn his sister's clothes has been hailed at some time or other as the "most perfect lady." Each of the "ladies" of the 1910 cast merited this distinction. The pains taken in costuming made Emmett Beach and Frank Parker fully as "captivating," "sweet," and "cute" as the press agent said, while Billy Merrill's graceful dancing completed the illusion and caused newcomers and oldtimers to declare "It isn't possible she's a boy!" The play was enriched too, by the clever impersonations by Paul Davis and Calvin Smith. Robert Milner and Vallee Appel as the pseudos proved conclusively that men taking the part of women can confuse even the chorus.

Dramatic Club Plays

Six monthly dinners, two fall playlets in the Reynolds club, and the annual winter play in Mandel hall mark this year as the banner year for the Dramatic Club. Never before have so many events come off under the auspices of the club in the first two quarters of the college year.

THE FALL PLAYS

The two fall plays, presented informally in the Reynolds club theatre on December 16, were "French Without a Master" by Tristan Bernard, and "Indian Summer" by Meilhac and Halevy, translated for the club by Barrett Clark.

"French Without a master" concerns an English interpreter who knew no language but his own, and the entanglements into which he plunges a young couple by his crude attempt at translating French. Effie Hewitt, in her interpretation of Seraphine Chanoine-Malherbe, a petite coquette, would, as one of the audience remarked, have done credit to Elsie Janis. Donald L Breed, as Gerald Forsyth, was lively and enthusiastic and showed unusual ability. Alice Lee Herrick was the "scream" of the evening in her slangy portrayal of the Cashier. Barrett H. Clark as Harry, the Interpreter, made a hit by his most effective character work. William F. Merrill in acting, makeup, and voice, was strikingly convincing as Jean Jacques Chanoine-Malherbe. The minor parts were competently handled by Robert Stenson, John J. Cleary, Jr., and Lander MacClintock.

"Indian Summer" concerns the story of an old gentleman of about fifty years who falls in love with the wife of his disinherited nephew. When she confesses that she is his niece by marriage, the old gentleman after much entreaty, is reconciled to his nephew.

Miss Eveline M. Phillips as Adrienne was an adorable and lovely heroine. Hilmar R. Baukhage as Briqueville, showed reserve and compulsion. Josephine Kern took the part of the motherly and kind Madame Leberton, and Robert V. Titus the part of the nephew.

The annual winter play given in Mandel hall on March 18, was, as Mr. Robertson expressed it, "about the most successful that the club has ever given." It was Bernard Shaw's "You Never Can Tell." This is probably his best acting play, and it is only fair to the cast to say that on March 18 it was one of his best acted plays. Mrs. Clandon, who eighteen years previous to the opening of the play had separated from her husband, Mr. Crampton, and gone to America where she changed her name, returns to England with her three children, Gloria, the oldest, and Dolly and Philip, twins. The children, knowing nothing of their father, invite Valentine, a struggling young dentist, and Mr. Crampton, his landlord, to lunch with the family. Neither Mr. Crampton nor his wife realize their situation until brought face to face at the lunch table, and then Mr. Crampton, a fiery tempered old man, is unable to cope with the delicateness of the situation and the meeting breaks up in a row.

Effie Hewitt

Valentine, who at first sight, has fallen in love with Gloria, proposes. He is penniless and when he realizes the difference between himself and the object of his adoration, attempts to back out. In the meantime McComas, the family solicitor, has procured a lawyer, Bohun by name, whom he expects will bring about a reconciliation between the husband and wife. They all meet in Mrs. Clandon's rooms, and Bohun, by his bullying and blustering, brings Mrs. Clandon and Crampton to their senses. Gloria then compells Valentine to keep his promise and they all dance out to the fancy ball. "And if I may respectfully put in a word," says William, the waiter, "You never can tell, sir, you—never—can—tell."

Much of the success of the play is due to the casting of parts and much to the conscientious work of the cast. Paul M. O'Dea as Valentine, seemed an ideal "duelist of sex" and the spirit and ability which he put into his work was highly commendable. Dorothy R. Goodrow made a perfect barbarian child in her peppery, rapid-fire part as Dolly. Hilmar R. Baukhage, took the part of the soft spoken, diplomatic waiter, William, and was "a regular Shakespeare." Eveline M. Phillips, in the part of Gloria, an adorable self-possessed "woman of the twentieth century," reached heights scarcely ever attained by an amateur actress. Donald L. Breed played the part of the irritable and darling old man, McComus, to perfection. Wilhelmina B. Barfield had all the attributes of the loving but over conscientious mother, Mrs. Clandon.

For days and days we wandered about the campus, gazing and wondering at those mysterious signs of "Watch This Space," when suddenly out of the void came that dancing girl poster announcing the first annual W. A. A. Vaudeville.

On February 24th the Women's Athletic Association inaugurated a new phase of the history of dramatic work at the University of Chicago, by giving a vaudeville show in Mandel Hall. And a more delightful or promising beginning for a tradition (for we hope it will be a tradition) could scarcely be imagined. In the first place the house, owing to the efficient work of the advertising manager, looked like the first night of a "Blackfriar" show: Not a seat unoccupied.

"But the play's the thing." It was opened by Bess Courtright in a most artistic Spanish dance. Next followed "A Tokio Two-bagger" in which Anita Baily, Irene Hastings, Paula Burke and Augusta Swawite very cleverly impersonated four members of our Japan baseball team. The "LeRoy Clog" and the "Flo-Jo Song" had great success. Then followed the two hits of the evening: Gertrude Perry in her burlesque of Bill Merrill's Blackfriar dancing, and Marie Ortmayer and Agnes Wayman as the "Cherry Sisters." All who saw Mr. Merrill do his Lenore dance in "Pseudo Suffragetts" could appreciate the absolutely immobile face and sweeping windmill arms of Miss Perry's impersonation. And how many have ever enjoyed two professional performers, or laughed more both at them and with them than the audience did when Miss Wayman and Miss Ortmayer gently but surely ripped everything up the back, from the Daily Maroon to Lexington Gymnasim? An impersonation of "Eliza crossing the ice," charcoal sketches of campus celebrities and innumerable rapid fire jokes made up their program.

The second half of the program was taken up by a musical farce in two acts. The first curtain rises on Miss Studley's office, where Dr. Fakeher (Zillah Shepherd) sells excuses; where Miss Montague as Miss Studley, diligently gives examinations, where Effie Hewitt as Miss Fierce answers all telephone calls and freshmen, with delightfully caustic remarks; where Jane Graff as Petey, gives us an eccentric dance worthy of George Cohan at his best. They all sing to us about their troubles when the curtain falls.

The second act, a whirlwind of songs and dances, opens on a basketball game between the girls of Chicago and Wellesley. "The Chicago marching song," "The Game's the Thing," the cheers of the bleachers, the snappy cheer-leading of Eveline Phillips—worthy of Roy Baldridge—and the artistic flower, hobble, corporation, basketball, and freshmen choruses, all combine to make this act the most spirited of the evening. And Miss Marie Rogers' beautiful rendering of "Heart's Maroon," a new Chicago song, crowned an already regal entertainment.

THE MEN'S GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club this year was the largest and best in the history of the University. Thirty old men responded to the call of the first meeting and about fifty new candidates appeared at the try-outs. The club is now made up of sixty-five members.

A number of concerts were given in and about the city in the Autumn and Winter Quarters. Among these were concerts at Pontiac, Ill., the First Regiment Armory, and the South Shore Country Club. For the Spring quarter some six or seven concerts have been booked.

The plans of the club this year include a larger program than ever before. In the home concert in cooperation with fifty members of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra and Mrs. Latiger Gannon, the club gave the best musical program ever held in Mandel hall under the auspices of a student organization. The club plans to devote itself next year to more typically glee club singing. In this way it is hoped that it will be able to identify itself more closely with the student life in the University.

The University Orchestral Association

The season 1910-11 was the second of the University Orchestral Association and it passe with a success even greater than that of last year. The season ticket sale embraced the whole c Mandel excepting seventy-one seats. The program for the series was lengthened from six t eight concerts—six by the Theodore Thomas Orchestra, a song recital by Madame Ernestin Schumann-Heink, and a piano recital by Madame Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.

An innovation was made in the manner of composing the program for the Orchestra Con certs. The first half of the program was devoted to the purely classical works of the older schoo while the second half was given over to lighter and more recent compositions. The program were composed, as far as was feasible, from requested numbers.

MME. SCHUMANN HEINK

The membership of the association, which is limite to one hundred, is now full. The association wa founded for the purpose of guaranteeing the financia success of the undertaking, but from the first the con certs have been self supporting.

A free lecture precedes each concert. The progran is analyzed by Miss Anne Shaw Faulkner assisted b Mr. Max Oberndorfer with illustrations on the pianc

OVERHEARD AT THE PROM

Miss Wheaton: "What an enchanting picture. It is such a clever idea to shut off the arc lights with the green trellis overhead. And the giant checkerboard of lights and shade on the floor makes you think you are playing Alice in Wonderland."

Mr. Chicago: "Yes our committee outdid themselves on decorations. Those bowers at each end of the room with rugs and comfortable chairs are new this year and are a great addition."

Miss W.: "Who is that girl in pink who seems to want everybody to have a good time?"

Mr. C.: "That's Geraldine Brown, otherwise "Gibby." She led the first wing with Ned Earle."

Miss W.: "And this girl passing in the picturesque green gown?"

Mr. C.: "That is Mollie Carroll. She led the alternate wing with Roy Baldridge."

Miss W.: "O yes, I have a dance with him later."

Mr. C.: "The floor begins to be crowded. This is the biggest crowd that has ever been at a Prom here. There were 100 tickets sold and a lot more have come who have not bought tickets. It is almost too many for comfort.

Miss W.: "O that doesn't matter; the music is so good you can't help enjoying the dancing. What a relief not to have all the ragtime and dance-hall things that turn every number into a romp. Take care of my program. I haven't a handsomer one in my collection. Let's read over the names of the committees and you can tell me all about the people on them."

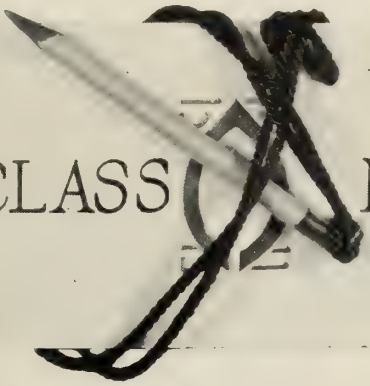
INTERCLASS HOP



"Up aloft
The silver snarling trumpets 'gan to chide;
The level chamber ready with its pride,
Was glowing to receive a thousand guests.
At length burst in the argent revelry,
With plumes, tiara, and all rich array."

And this Inter-Class Hop—the most significant innovation of recent years in University social life—was opened June tenth, nineteen hundred and ten in Bartlett gymnasium.

This dance takes the place of the Junior Prom, and either because of the newness of the function, or because it is really more hospitable and democratic than the older arrangement, or because June-time, moon-time, roses, and music make a combination always hard to resist the Inter-Class Hop went off with unusual enthusiasm and eclat.

READY FOR THE SPRING QUARTER 1911

The University of Chicago
Settlement

The University of Chicago Settlement

The University Settlement is in reality as well as name a part of our university. It was originally founded by students here and is now largely conducted and supported by students and faculty. Undergraduates, graduates, and faculty at present carry on most of the activities.

The work which is done by the settlement may be divided into two classes. The first consists of educational endeavors. Women are instructed in the proper care of their homes, in sewing, in cooking, and in improving, generally the living conditions. Men and boys are taught citizenship, English, and manual training. and are aided in forming and conducting clubs of various kinds. The settlement is so successfully conducted that it has become the favorite gathering place for the children of the district "back of the yards."

The present work of the boy's director at the settlement began a few years ago when the boys of the neighborhood measured out a baseball field on the ground now occupied by the Settlement buildings. Since the erection of a gymnasium and the hiring of an athletic instructor, the work has gradually evolved to its present form. In the past year about two hundred boys, varying in age from four to twenty years, and representing half a dozen different nationalities have enjoyed the regular activities of the Settlement.

These activities include debating, social clubs, manual training, clay modeling, dancing, singing, and gymnasium classes. Each club is allowed the use of the gymnasium one hour a week, half the time being devoted to graded gymnastics and the other half to games such as basketball and indoor baseball. In addition to this, each club has a regular weekly meeting in one of the club rooms.

In the past year a printing school has been started for a few of the boys in the neighborhood. This was made possible by the generosity of the School of Education which furnished the printing press and a competent instructor.

The summer work of the Settlement is somewhat different from that of the winter. Baseball and other outdoor sports are encouraged among the boys. Various kinds of outings are also conducted to points outside of the city. This year the University High School and the Parents' Association have raised $1,000 to be used for a summer camp for boys, and to send girls into the country. Many of the outings are one day affairs, part of the expense being borne by the boys and girls themselves. Visits are made to such places as Algonquin and Belmont, Illinois, and Miller's, Indiana.

Ten hundred and forty-one people made merry on the night of January twenty-first at the Settlement Dance in Bartlett Gymnasium. This sets a new record of attendance at such a function, being over three hundred more than the preceding year. The dance started out with the customary reception line, which reached once and a half around the gym. The special features of the dance were the "hobble skirt extra," in which some dignified senior men pranced around the floor in short hobble skirts amidst the uproarious applause of the dancers gathered on the side lines. The Glee club made a hit with several of its popular selections. The last dance was the storm and spot-light extra. All the lights were turned out and the arc lights flashed while the orchestra played storm music. During the dance a spot light was flashed from the roof down onto the dancers.

The Men Who Have Played Their Last Game

Captain "Bill" Crawley proved himself a worthy leader throughout the 1910 season and closed his career for Chicago most fittingly. Coming to the Midway after a year at Throop Institute on the Pacific Coast, Crawley early proved his worth in the game and in his initial year on the varsity squad won a regular berth in the backfield. Last year he was followed consistently by ill luck and was repeatedly hampered by unfortunate injuries.

When the captaincy in 1910 was awarded him by a majority vote of the team the popular campus spirit was echoed. He was one of the first athletes on Marshall Field for fall practice and throughout the training and regular seasons was invaluable in directing and encouraging the veterans and younger recruits.

Nothing too good can be said of Crawley's sincerity in the fight for honors for his Alma Mater. At times when discouragements looked up overwhelmingly in the horizon and the outlook for the Maroons was decidedly dark, Bill invariably came to the front with renewed vigor, infused new life into his fellows and demonstrated the fighting spirit that was a prime factor in the work of the team against rivals who almost always were stronger and more experienced and frequently had been expected to win from Chicago eleven with ease.

"Bunny" Rogers, after two years of patient and diligent effort, found the opportunity in his final year as a wearer of the Maroon to make good for "The Old Man" and Chicago. He won the right to be regular left half back early in the training season and carried himself through the year in faultless style.

"Bunny" came to Chicago from North Division high school where he has been one of the stars in football and track circles and found in his light weight and lack of experience the strongest obstacles in the way of obtaining a regular berth at the start. Undaunted by this, however, he utilized his time well as a student under Coach Stagg, became a thoroughly valuable man in 1909, when he was substituted in many of the games and entered upon his 1910 career as a regular.

Pluck, endurance and tenacity were never lacking from "Bunny's" make-up in his performances as a Maroon. Time and again he responded nobly and effectively when called upon to advance the ball and by his craftiness in running interference, accuracy in tackling and general all-around work made himself a worthy partner to Captain Crawley.

INDIANA NORTHWESTERN and ILLINOIS GAMES

Football

Facing the inestimable handicap of inexperience and without the services of all but two veterans who had made up the team in 1909, the Maroons entered the race for gridiron honors last fall in the most disintegrated condition since the disastrous season of 1901. Youthful and ambitious candidates there were in abundance, but these assets fell short of realizing their goal against the stubborn grit and determination of eastern and western rivals "to down Chicago."

It cannot be said that the team ever really developed the strength of which it was possible, although critics throughout the country accorded Coach Stagg merited laurels in the expression that no other coach could have made a similar showing with the material in hand. Captain Crawley, Rogers, Rademacher and Kassulker comprised the total contingent of veterans when the roll call was given on September 20, and Coach Stagg faced the necessity of bringing out the required talents from twenty hustling young Sophomores.

Despite the gloomy outlook for Chicago when the 1910 season was inaugurated hopes ran high that the team which the Maroon mentor had developed and organized in three weeks of strenuous practice would rise to the occasion and hold its own against conference rivals.

Doubly disappointing, then, was the opening game of the year when the Midway heroes went down to defeat before Indiana, 6 to 0, although they outplayed and outgeneraled their opponents. It was the first victory Indiana ever won over Chicago in football.

The following Saturday the team, supported by more than one thousand ardent rooters, invaded the camp of our most bitter rival—Illinois. There, too, fortune refused to smile on Maroon hopes. A second shut-out was the result of the struggle, this time by a score of 3 to 0 but the Orange and Blue triumph was accomplished only after one of the most spectacular and desperately fought matches ever seen on the State University grounds, the trusty toe of the veteran Seiler affording Illinois its lone score.

Time still remained for Coach Stagg's pupils to rally and redeem the dual shock of the opening games and they entered the game on October 22 against Northwestern with a wonderful display of the old Chicago spirit that has brought home so many championships. The visitors were overwhelmed by the rush of Captain Crawley and his men at the start of the struggle and the team worked as a unit more perfectly than it had yet done. Two touchdowns were scored but there ended the effective offensive play of the Chicago eleven. Time and again they entered the shadow of Northwestern's goal only to lose the ball almost within reach of the line and the battle ended with the pigskin in the visitor's territory where it had been kep the greater part of the time.

The coming of Minnesota was conceded generally as a forlorn hope for another Chicago riumph for the powerful Gopher machine was made up almost to a man of the veterans who had wrested the conference laurels from the Maroon eleven in 1909. Captain McGovern's assault was from the starting whistle. Repeatedly did the Maroons rally in dogged defense and on two occasions attempted to penetrate their opponent's battle front. The result was never in doubt but due credit was accorded the Chicago players when Minnesota had been held to a quartet of touchdowns.

Purdue entered our camp confident of victory and bent upon duplicating the feat of Indiana. For a time it appeared that they might succeed but the plucky defense of the Maroon linesmen and the superb work of Crawley, Rogers and Young on offense in time upset the tenacious front of the Boilermakers and the game was turned into a more or less decisive victory for us.

It was with uncertain hopes that the team departed on November 10 for Ithaca, New York, there to meet Cornell and if possible, to break the 6 to 6 ties of 1908 and 1909. The easterners, though battled into helplessness by at least two of their near rivals, were waiting expectantly for the coming of the Maroons. The final 18 to 0 score tells only too well the outcome of the uphill fight of the Chicago warriors. Only one chance did we have to score and then Davenport missed the opportunity through an unfortunate fall after he had escaped all but one of the rival tacklers.

With the grim determination to bring to a close with a victory a thoroughly disappointing and disastrous season, Captain Crawley led his men to Madison for the concluding game of the year. The youngsters of the team had shown greatly increased speed and highly improved skill in the week of practice and predictions were for a Badger downfall. Yet such were the fortunes of the game that the inspiring grit of the Chicago availed nothing when Wisconsin athletes twice utilized momentary mistakes by the Maroons and, aided in no small degree by good luck, escaped for long runs and scores.

All in all the season of 1910 presented manifold more difficulties to gridiron success than are often seen in a single year. Vastly altered codes of rules were to be mastered, a modified style of play was a necessity and other similar handicaps joined with the lamentable shortage of seasoned material to blast the hopes for Chicago. A more thrilling fight in the face of so great odds could scarcely have been made, and spirit, pluck and willingness were never wanting.

TRACK

Quality rather than quantity is the keynote to the repeated successes of University of Chicago athletes in track and field events during the last year. Coach Stagg never during that time has had a long retinue of performers but his keen judgment in the use of those available has brought home manifold honors for the spring and winter seasons.

W. PHILLIPS COMSTOCK

Maroon success in the tenth annual intercollegiate conference meet at Champaign on June 4, 1910, proved disappointing after the crowning victory of the preceding year. Yet Chicago hopes hinged upon the ability practically of five men against the vast field of the best athletes in the west. Davenport earned for himself a classification as one of the grandest if not the foremost middle distance runner in America today by his triumphs in the quarter and half mile events. Crawley's strength had been too much worn down in the grueling spring competition for him to be at his best and Chicago was crowded into fourth place in the final standing with Illinois only one-fourth of a point ahead.

The addition of a half dozen strong candidates from the class of 1914 placed the team in far more formidable shape this year, however, and the winter indoor season includes but one defeat for Midway contenders. That was retrieved handily, nevertheless, for Illinois was overcome in Bartlett gymnasium on March 11 after it had been victorious over Captain Rogers and his team at Champaign three weeks before.

More extensive winter competition than had heretofore been the policy of the Chicago athletic body marked the 1911 indoor season. Purdue twice was defeated and Northwestern given a double humbling by decisive scores. Then as a climax to the schedule and an indication of the present strength of the Maroon contingent, Coach Stagg's ambitious pupils won the first annual indoor intercollegiate meet at Northwestern on March 25, 1911.

Base Ball Team, Season 1910

J. J. Pegues

Chicago's 1910 baseball team finished the season having won five of its ten Conference games. That the team did not finish with an even better record was due to that always conspicuous factor in local athletics —hard luck. Just after the most encouraging spring practice in years, during which the team won three out of four games from strong semi-pro nines, there came a telling succession of injuries. Boyle sprained his ankle in the last practice game which kept him idle two weeks and detracted from his playing all season. Teichgraeber broke the small bone in his leg in sliding to second base. Captain Pegues suffered a sprained ankle in the first Conference game at Madison, and did not entirely recover till June. Collings also sustained injuries at this time which kept him out of some games and handicapped him throughout the season. With this crippled team Chicago began the Conference season disastrously, losing three out of the first five games.

The close of the season saw a decided brace in the work of the team which ended what seemed at the outset a most unsuccessful year with an even break. The feature game of the season was the 17-inning game at Urbana—the last of the great fights between "Pat" Page and Buzick which ended in a defeat for Chicago by a 2–1 score, and which finally decided that Chicago should have no claim on the 1910 championship

Basket Ball Team, Season 1911

CLARK G. SAUER

That Chicago has not to its credit a fourth consecutive basketball championship is due almost wholly to the same combination of impediments that rose in the path of the football team. Graduation had deprived the squad of all but one regular player and the manifestly tumultuous task of building up a triumphant team in a single year was the one which faced coaches, players and rooters when the curtain was rung up for the favorite indoor sport.

So completely were the ranks depleted of veterans during the months intervening since the close of the 1909 season that Clark Sauer alone remained from the combination which triumphed over the entire conference field and annexed the western title the preceding year. Alfred Kelly originally was awarded the captaincy and when he decided to withdraw from school the honor was accorded to Edwards, who had won his way into the first ranks by consistent and brainy performances. He, too, was found missing when the roll call was given and Sauer, though only a Junior, was given a unanimous vote for the place twice left vacant.

More fortunate than the gridiron tutors was active Coach Schommer in the caliber and quantity of new material which presented itself in the fight for places on the team. Due perhaps in a great degree to their careful training as Freshmen, Goettler, Paine, Bell and Freeman early displayed an aptitude for ready application of what they saw and heard. Greater ambition and higher hope could not have been possible than that which prevailed in their hearts and from the start their work in the practice season was keen and progressive.

Under the acute direction and experienced tutelage of "Long John," man after man was brought out and improved until the opening of the season found the Maroon quintet competent and versatile in every phase of the game. The early pessimism gradually had been supplanted by rising optimism and the schedule opened victoriously in the decisive defeat of Northwestern.

The initial exhibition of the Midway athletes was such as to deserve for them the prediction that they could, by equally consistent work, make themselves a decided factor in the struggle for 1910 laurels. When they turned the second game of the schedule into a triumph over Illinois, Maroon hopes rose vastly and Coach Schommer and the players were accorded a world of praise for their work which was classed as nothing short of wonderful.

Further reckoning still was to be had, however, with Purdue, Minnesota and Wisconsin, all of whom were accorded by critics the brightest chances of being strong contenders for first honors in the Conference circuit. Just when it appeared that Captain Sauer and his fellows had triumphed over the vast field of odds against them they stumbled disastrously before the onslaught of the foe and in rapid succession lost three games.

In the face of such a disheartening slump as that suffered in the defeats by Purdue, Indiana and Wisconsin within two weeks' time, the Chicago team was not credited with a possible chance to regain their place in the first division and push the teams who held the race at that time. Equally surprising, then, and doubly joyful to Chicago adherents was the spectacular rally of the team which carried them gradually closer to their most bitter rivals and ultimately placed them in a position where they might, by an unbroken succession of victories in the remainder of the schedule, culminate the season in a tie with Purdue for first place.

The dogged, irresistable attack of the team, man for man and as a unit, which was uppermost in the valiant struggle in the last half of the season typified to a marked degree the spirit that is most honored by Chicago. Minnesota was met and overcome in Bartlett gymnasium in a battle where the apparent roughness of the game was due rather to the fierceness of the play than to unsavory intentions on the part of any of the athletes.

Illinois was again defeated the following week and Northwestern was given a second humiliation in a mid-week game. Wisconsin invaded the Maroon camp for the first game of a foreign trip which was to win or lose for them the championship. So terrific and grueling was the struggle between Badger and Maroon that from start to finish not more than four points ever marked the advantage held by one team or the other. The ultimate victory though only by a margin of two points, placed the team in a position to equal the percentage of Purdue by a fifth consecutive triumph, this time over Minnesota and on the latter's floor.

No team ever trained more carefully and insistently than did Coach Schommer's men before this final game. They departed for Minneapolis with the Godspeed of their legion of rooters ringing in their ears. They gave for their Alma Mater every iota of strength and cunning that they possessed when the game was in progress but the tenacity of the veteran Gopher combination finally asserted itself and by an unflinching defense held to the end of the game the advantage which it had accumulated in the opening period.

Too great credit cannot be awarded to every man on the team for his superb endeavor to bring back to the Midway another chamionpship and it has been but seldom that a more spectacular fight has been made by any team when it was counted out of the struggle for honors because of a lamentable period of weakness just after the start of the season.

Cross Country Run

HELD AT MADISON, WISCONSIN, NOVEMBER 19, 1910

WON BY (1) Wisconsin (Dohmen, Cleveland, Hoover, Price, Reed). Time . . . 26:21
(2) Minnesota; (3) Northwestern; (4) Ames; (5) Purdue; (6) Notre Dame; (7) Iowa;
(8) Chicago (Carpenter, Reed, Lunde, Seegers, Roe).

CROSS COUNTRY

The Cross Country season was rather a keen disappointment on account of the good prospects at the beginning. After the team was chosen it appeared that Chicago had an excellent chance to finish among the first in the big race. The team did not develop as was hoped, however, and, when on the eve of the Conference race one of the strongest men was declared ineligible, it was seen that Chicago had little chance. Moreover the peculiar, hilly course at Madison over which the race was run, operated against Captain Carpenter's squad with the result that Chicago finished eighth in a field of ten. Wisconsin won the race in remarkable time.

In the tryouts for the team the men finished in the following order: Capt. Carpenter, Reed, Skinner, Roe, Lunde, Sloane, Seagers. At Madison the finish of the Chicago men was Reed, Capt. Carpenter, Lunde, Roe, Seagers.

Besides the team the Cross Country Club is composed this year of Grey, Brooks, Dunlap, Hammill, Gilbert, Wells, Sayre, and Claypol.

Soccer

After the preliminary practice in the spring, the first University of Chicago soccer team was chosen last fall with Fay Fulkerson as captain. The only other conference college then in the soccerfield was Illinois, but games were played with many city teams. Most of these games were won but the important contests with Illinois were lost on account of the greater experience of the down-state forwards.

Other conference colleges, Wisconsin, Purdue, and Indiana expect to organize teams next year. Although Fulkerson and Watts will be lost, the outlook for a championship soccer team is by no means gloomy.

Women's Athletics

The past year has been a most successful one for the Woman's Athletic Association. The gymnasium has, as never before, stood as the center of enjoyment, friendship, and good fellowship among the women. The spirited rivalry aroused by the spring games resulted in a victory for the Seniors in basketball; outbalanced however, by the Junior championships in baseball and hockey. The true sportsmanship of both victors and losers was shown at the annual banquet held the tenth of June.

The Freshman reception, the parties, and games of the autumn quarter have succeeded in arousing the Chicago spirit in the new girls and have consequently increased the membership as well as the prospects of the association. The winter vaudeville, held under the management of Gertrude Perry, has gone down in W. A. A. annals as an epoch-making event.

After the excitement of this successful entertainment subsided, the championship basketball games, and the gymnastic contest served to keep interest alive. The Spring Quarter still holds many activities in store. The June Festival, the championship series in baseball and hockey, and the the Annual Banquet are a few of the attractions eagerly awaited

Sidelights of the Sports

Great was the rejoicing last year when Capt. Lawson raised the hoodoo off her name. It was "Tommie's" fourth year on a basketball team, but her first experience as a member of a champion five

All marveled at the Junior Championship in hockey, with Florence Ames and Olive Davis on the opposing side.

League pitchers might well profit by watching Margaret Sullivan twirl the ball.

Whether Joe Kern can raise a racquet or not, she certainly can handle one. Remember how she won the tennis tournament?

Florence Lawson and Irene Hastings seemed to have a corner on the ball in last year's basketball games. Team work was second nature to them

Batting averages at Lexington have Ty Cobb backed off the board.

Senior prospects in basketball are bright for 1911 since Zillah Shepherd and Laura Verhoeven joined the ranks of blue.

Mary Phister was certainly there with the goods in baseball, but even a cracked pitcher can't win without support.

Cut minors in "gym" are bothersome at times. Mary Chaney and Jeo Kern found them so last year, when kept off the basketball teams for "minor" reasons.

Record breakers turn up everywhere. You all know Jane Graff changed the mark to 4.4 in high jump last year.

Florence Lawson won the gymnastic contest, with 28 points. No surprise to anyone.

"Who asked what W. A. A. meant?"

"The W stands for Coach Wayman of course, the double 'a' for Stagg. Oh! No! There's nothing partial about Chicago women."

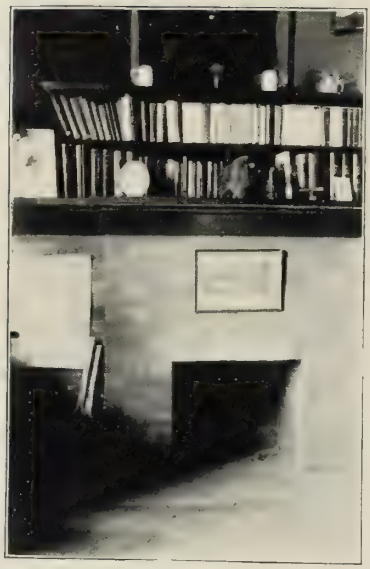
Hitchcock Hall



A Corner in Hitchcock Hall

The sections of Hitchcock, while unable to boast the boisterous levity of Snell or the athletic prowess of Middle D, are not for that reason without distinction or cause for pride. For where else on the campus can the inmates be delighted, rendered crazy with joy in fact, by the strains of two pianos? And where can they be roused to fresh hope by an ever returning rumor that one of the machines is to be confiscated because the contributions to the sinking fund have fallen off or been used for a friendly little smoker or reception? Where but in Hitchcock?

Then there are other joys. An unusual opportunity is furnished to watch the workings of the splendid force of private detectives employed by the University's business departments in their efforts to convict the heads of sections of crime. Why go to Russia when you can live in Hitchcock and be suspected of having an electric tea-kettle?

Then what hall can boast of three janitors? Could all the halls by pooling produce a triumvirate like unto ours? We scorn to boast of our breakfast room or of our large contigent of illustrious instructors. They are always with us and add dignity to our house meetings and vigor to our protests against the tyrany of the powers that be. Above all we once got a third of the membership out to a house meeting. Can you ask for more?

Snell Hall

Snell is the hall of many traditions. Since the student days of Deans Linn and Gale, Snell has won and kept the somewhat shady honor of being the "rough-house" hall of the campus. But in the last year quite a change has come over this erstwhile noise plant. With the rise of some of the old residents to age, dignity, and faculty position they saw clearly the iniquities of old life in Snell. Then, too, with the growing dignity of everything about the University, the newer members of Snell have come to see dimly the new lights of perpetual dormitory peace.

So, wonder of wonders, Snell has reformed. No longer shall water be poured promiscuously nor freshmen abused nightly, but peace shall reign forever in the former abode of confusion. And so, perhaps, Snell will in time outlive its reputation as a roughneck hall.

But the abandonment of all these more violent manifestations has only strengthened the old close fellowship for which the hall is equally famous. Sixty freshmen, graduates, athletes, debaters, literary lights, grinds, and mere good fellows all live in Snell and live closer together in spirit as well as in physical fact than is possible anywhere else on the campus.

So much has Snell spirit done, and more besides. The social program here is more extensive than in any other dormitory, four dances and three smokers being given last year. The Cooler, the annual publication of Snell, edited last year by Edward Stein, contains an account of these stunts as well as all other hall activities. Fay Fulkerson and "Red" Whiteside were during the past year secretaries of Snell Hall.

Graduate Halls

THE GRADUATE HALLS were among the first buildings of the University, ante-dating all the other dormitories. They were built as a result of the munificence of Mr. Rockefeller effected shortly after his conception of a new institution in Chicago, and became Graduate House, Middle Divinity, and South Divinity House. The names as now popularly applied are North Hall, Middle Divinity Hall, and South Divinity Hall.

North Hall

This has become with the other two, an undergraduate dormitory contributing much to the activity of the university. Athletics have therein been fostered, and social life has risen to the fullness of its growth.

Middle Divinity Hall

This is perhaps unfortunate in the connotation of its name as suggesting the narrow divine —a suggestion by no means warranted. The hall has partaken of and given to the spirit of the institution of which it is a part, and its inmates may be found frequently to associate with the 10:30 aggregations in various parts of the campus. Five floors up—close to Heaven—is Maroon Heights, wherein none may enter who are not wholly filled with the spirit of education.

South Divinity Hall

In consideration whereof it may be surprising to learn that its members quite frequently find pleasure in the lighter side of education, often appearing in haste past Cobb Hall bound for the tennis courts, and partaking of each othets contributions in several social meetings in the year.

Foster Hall

NANCY FOSTER SONG

To the name of Nancy Foster,
  Known and loved by all,
Stands forever to exalt her,
  Nancy Foster Hall.
Ever loyal, daughters royal,
  We her work install,
Sing we praise to Nancy Foster,
  And to Foster Hall.

As the chimes from lofty tower
  Ring the evening bell,
So our spirits hour by hour
  Foster's praises tell.
Hours of gladness, free from sadness!
  Happy sisters all,
Sing we to our Foster friendships
  And to Foster Hall.

When the firelight gleams around us,
  To her kingly chair,
Comes the one whose thoughts surround us
  Tales with us to share.
Reynolds stories, Foster glories,
  Ever dear to all,
Sing we of our Foster mother
  And to Foster Hall.

O'er the Midway's green before us
  Comes the sweet refrain,
Foster's rafters echo o'er us
  To our happy strain.
Swell the singing, ever ringing—
  Gladly we recall
When our student life is over,
  Days in Foster Hall.

—Helen Hendricks

Green Hall

The unpublished history of Green begins with the Faculty baby party of last May, an annual surprise to new members when unsuspecting round-eyed youngsters suddenly connect themselves with parents whose single attributes before had been departmental lore. With the full of 1910 came another freshman class and a new round of events to spell with a capital E, the convention of mothers to discuss infant welfare, and the comparative advantages of strychnine and laudanum to keep silence on the second floor, the infant's return on stunt night with talent that could bark and move or monologue with equal ease, and the Autumn house dance. Early in January the hall was at home to the Pioneers, the faculty, trustees or students who were in the first annual register and knew the charms of the campus when "froggies croaked all night" and Snell was the only dormitory, when President Judson was just a dean, and Prof. Atwood only a freshman. Winter quarter brought, too, the spread of the Russian dancers, the Valentine party where Uncle Sam and Cupid made their first University delivery, the Colonial banquet where President and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson entertained in honour of George and Martha Washington, where all were merry but the ghost of Nathan Hale, the two college at-homes to settlement girls, the masquerade and the winter quarter formal, a long list and a gay one. Add to these a host of informal ventures unto Play and there you are with a record of happy memories of the year 1910-1911 in Green Hall.

Kelly Hall

Kelly Hall manifests this year the same genial spirit of good will which has characterized her from the first. Her cordiality began with a beach supper for the new girls—fun in spite of sand seasoned food. The new girls returned this greeting with a vaudeville which aptly revealed to the old house members their failings and also gave them suggestions entertaining if not helpful.

Hallowe'en with its witchery, brought all together again in a masked cotillion of black and yellow figures. After which each visited the mysterious cave of the Sibyl and received her fate.

By strange chance some faculty letters to good old Saint Nicholas were waylaid at Kelly. They were claimed at a Sunday buffet supper, December the fourth, when each received his intercepted letter in verse and song. Santa Claus himself came a few nights later and presided over a wondrous towering Christmas tree.

The Winter Quarter was inaugurated with a delightful informal dance. Soon Kelly frolicked again, as a crowd of romping children eager for messages from Saint Valentine. Birthday parties, teas and "everybody invited" spreads frequently bring all together for royal good times.

Beecher Hall

In the year that's now passing we've had lots of fun
On the campus and in Beecher Hall,
We had study and fun and been gay as could be,
In these Beecher days, dearest of all.
We began by a "Beach" party given this fall
By the old girls who led us that night
In a frolic that we shall be glad to recall,
And of which 'tis a pleasure to write.
A Hallowe'en party came next in the line
Of the good times that fell to us here,
And we surely had girls of all sorts and design
Who in costumes most strange did appear.
Our last Beecher fete was a most brilliant act
Given the old girls by the new,
And we had such a time that we think its a fact
That we'll have the thing over to do.
Now we've told you some "jollities" we've had this year,
And we wish we could tell you them all;
But we'll have to refrain and content ourselves now
With nine rahs for our dear Beecher Hall.

Greenwood Hall

Greenwood hall is not two years old yet, but it seems, like Minerva, to have sprung full-grown from the forehead of the University, and we Greenwoodites think that in leaving this forehead, we brought all its gray matter with us. In spite of this, every one of us has to study and study hard too. But our wise brains have been able, miraculously enough, to comprehend the old adage about all work and no play; so we often indulge in some recreation.

During the Autumn Quarter, five girls organized an orchestra, and this inspired the formation of a Glee Club. About thirty-five signed the list the first day, and everyone was enthusiastic. When, through the interest of Dr. Gunsaulus, Mr. David Prothero became our director, the Glee Club was established as a permanent feature of Greenwood and has already demonstrated great powers and possibilities.

We have all been interested in watching Greenwood grow, and so have taken great delight in the furnishing of a new reception room. Piece by piece, there have come a colonial chandelier, chairs, dainty colonial wall-paper, a whole-souled, wide-seated Sheraton lounge, and, as a gift to the house, a dented, bronze urn. To make it seem more our home, the house-members purchased several antique brass candelabra as a gift to the house on its first birthday. Altogether, Greenwood has had a joyous prosperous year, going even beyond the expectations of our most sanguine friends

FRATERNITIES

Inter-Fraternity Athletics

The past year has shown unusual interest and keen competition in all inter-fraternity athletics. Many classy teams have appeared in each contest, leaving the final result in doubt until the very last. The increase in friendly rivalry which has resulted from these contests during the year past portends well for the future of these contests.

The baseball season last spring brought forth sixteen confident contenders for the championship. Unfortunately, however, some were doomed to disappointment. By the time the semi-finals were reached there were only four confident contenders left, although many others were still telling what might have happened if they had only been able to hit the ball. The four fortunate teams, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Tau Delta, Chi Psi, and Phi Delta Theta, soon decided among themselves that Delta Tau and Beta represented the best talent on the diamond, and delegated them to play for the championship. In the final game, witnessed by crowds of enthusiastic fans, the Betas proved the superiority of their slugging department, winning by the score of 6 to 4.

This winter bowling came to the fore with a rush, and although not quite as many were permitted to exhibit their skill, still, on the whole, there was nearly as much interest shown as in the baseball games. This time the Delta Kappa Epsilon, Alpha Delta Phi, Phi Delta Theta, and Alpha Tau Omega teams contended in the semi-finals. The Dekes proved their superior prowess by winning the final match from the Alpha Taus. The total scores in the final match were, Deke, 2374; Alpha Tau, 2260.

For true excitement and enthusiasm, however, the Inter-Fraternity Relay this winter excelled all past events. In one division a tie resulted and in another a double foul, necessitating the running of both of these races over. Then, in the finals, in which Alpha Delta Phi, Psi Upsilon, Chi Psi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon were represented, a second race was found necessary, the banner at length being awarded to S. A. E.

During the last three years the deans of the University, so report says, have been urging upon the congregation that a professional point of view be inculcated in all undergraduates as a panacea for the waywardnesses of irresponsible youth over twenty. To that learned tribunal, in support of the dean's case, we humbly and respectfully submit our evidence, data gathered from study of the subject by laboratory method.

A few have already escaped by the formal exit, some more starved for non-professional nourishment and disappeared through the cracks. Still a few more discovered that they craved more what other professions had to offer. If you try those that are left you may find traces of a two year old banquet, slighter traces of a year old banquet, but none whatever of the senior spread. They tell you there have been three smokers, but they were all for law men only. These survivors seem to have a strong attack of professional point of view. They have little time for games, or the theater, for many other things they don't care. Work is not greatly upset by a massmeeting or even a Blackfriar show, altho there they are not wholly without worthy representative. Even that worthy light with the rest, however, pigeonholes his thinking most readily in tort, contract, or equity boxes. The fetes are disturbed when some harmless theorist from more general social fields even wanders curiously into the hive. They once were monks, athletes and college men, but at the end they are all near-lawyers, fully conscious of their status and thronging eagerly to a mock trial. At least part of the time they read their cases, for they have a professional point of view.

Law Class, 1912

The secretary of the class of nineteen hundred twelve of the Chicago Law School, of lawful age, being first duly sworn deposeth and saith: That to the best knowledge of the said secretary the following is a true, careful, and exact account of the afore-mentioned class; that the number officially enrolled in this class according to Miss Bradley and the Dean is seventy-six, of whom three are women; that of this number ten are over six feet in height, the others being less than the said six feet with the exception of Messrs. Mountcastle and Hess who are still less; that seventy per cent have eyes dark grey or darker, and thirty per cent blue eyes; that nothing in the last mentioned description is to be construed to include the eyes of Mr. Hicks; that the inspector has failed in securing a satisfactory report on the hair of said class; but that the statistics show a preponderance of evidence in favor of the dark locks; that in order of intensity the reds are Picken, Mountcastle, and Lambach; that class possesses one mustache on the face of one Mayer; and that the inspector could not see enough on the top of Mr. Worthwine's cranium to make a report thereon; that four are married, and none of the others are without hopes (the inspector begs to add that no reason was found why anyone, of said class should or would fail in securing his heart's desire); that a full account of the up-to-date style of this class is to be found in the CAP AND GOWN for 1909; that to this complete wardrobe has been added this year, one brown suit worn by W. H. Chambers, six of Stiger's gay ties, a hair-cut by McDonald, late of Michigan, three suits and ten baby-blue ties by Krusemark; and that we regret to recount the loss of Mr. Fonnesbeck's pompadour; that the grades made by the respective members of this class have averaged higher than the inspector's arithmetic could reach; that no man has ever made more than four "cons" in one quarter; that the statistics show ninety per cent of the class-room discussions to be led by this class; that the weight of authority is always with some member; that the vast majority of the aforesaid class have the courage to expect to make a living from the practice of law sometime in the future; that the replies of the above mentioned three women to this question were slightly hesitating; that the grades made by Moser, Pope, Morrow, and Stainbach are such as to warrant the sad conclusion that they can never make the business pay; that the inspector has found this class undividually and collectively to be of exceptional charm and brilliancy; that it has done much to give the Chicago Law School its present high rank during the past two years; that the faculty is making every effort to keep this class another year so as to add new laurels to said institution; and further affiant saith not.

SECRETARY LAW CLASS 1912.

Subscribed and sworn to by Secretary Law Class 1912 before F. W. Schenk, Notary Public, this twenty-sixth day of April A. D., 1912. F. W. SCHENK, Notary Public.

The Class of 1913

When the history of the Law School of the University of Chicago is written, the class of 1913 will occupy a unique place. When we entered we were assured, collectively and individually, by upper classmen and by faculty, that our case was hopeless, that at least thirty-nine per cent of all classes that had entered the Law School had perished via the "Your presence is no longer desirable" route, that we, of course, could not be an exception. But we are! Of course the year is not quite over and some cynical upper classmen still insist the seeming inevitable must come, but the faculty have admitted that we have made an hitherto unequaled record. We admit they had us bluffed but we produced the results. Never before have the library attendants worked so assiduously for their scholarships. A casual observation shows that two-thirds of the library sharks at any hour are Freshmen.

In our ranks we have already discovered worthy successors for the great lawyers of our time. What class can boast a Fox, with an insight into technicalities that would put Elihu Root to shame? Where shall we find another Gray, whose cold, pitiless analysis destroys all opposition? Or a Harris, whose melodic tones and radiant smile suffices where learning fails? Where shall we find the indomitable pugnacity of our friend Ryan? And what Chicago product can be placed beside our insuperable Jerome?

We hesitate, but we must. The fruit of years of effort, of selection and discrimination is evident in the choice collection of spirits in our number. We fear that we may weary you with self-praise but we warn you of the number of cum laudes which a grudging faculty will be compelled to surrender in June, 1913.

JOHN MILTON DODSON
Dean of the Medical School

Rush Medical College

For several years the University of Chicago has been carrying on the first two years' work of Rush Medical College. The affiliation providing for this relationship was established in 1898. Previous to that time the work had been done at Rush Medical College proper, which is situated on Harrison Street, between Hermitage avenue and Wood street.

The institution has had a long career. It was chartered by the Illinois Legislature in 1837, but did not begin holding lectures until 1843. The college was founded by the late Daniel Brainerd, who was also its first president. The growth of the institution was rapid and healthy. By 1867 it owned a large, new building at Dearborn avenue and Indiana street. This, however, was destroyed in the great fire of 1871. The following three years the school occupied temporary quarters on the grounds of the Cook County Hospital, but in 1875 the present clinical building was erected. Since then the Laboratory, across the street from the first structure, and the Senn Building, just east of it, have been added.

In connection with the Medical College is the Presbyterian Hospital, established in 1883; an affiliation has also been established recently with the Children's Memorial Hospital. Rush Medical College is one of the several institutions officially recognized by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of London, England. On the faculty are the following well known specialists, who are a large factor in making the reputation of the college what it is: Frank Billings, Ludvig Hektoen, Edwin Oakes Jordan, James Nevins Hyde, Ephraim Fletcher Ingals, Walter Stanley Haines, John Milton Dodson, Arthur Dean Bevan, John Clarence Webster, Thor Rothstein, George Elmer Shambaugh, and Edward V. L. Brown.

By the terms of affiliation with the University of Chicago, the Board of Trustees is composed of members not belonging to the teaching force of the college. This board assumes the financial management and appoints the faculty, but delegates to the latter the control of the educational work subject to the rules of the University and the approval of the Board of Trustees The affiliation thus assures the maintainance of a higher order of instruction and a steady advance in modern educational methods.

The Art Student's Club

KATE MIZELLE

FLORA PERRIN

An Art Students club was organized during the Winter quarter by the students registered in industrial and fine arts in the School of Education.

Those students who are specializing in the fine and industrial arts are eligible to active membership in the club; faculty members interested in this phase of educational work are advisory members.

The purpose of the club as outlined in the constitution is "to promote a spirit of fellowship among the Art students, to increase an interest in the present day art movements, and to gain a just conception of the educational value of the arts and industries."

In addition to the regular meetings of the club, at which questions immediately connected with teaching of the Arts are discussed informally, occasional visits are made to the Art Institute and other places in the city of interest to Art students, and series of lectures are given each quarter by different members of the faculty. These latter are open to all students of the University. The list of lectures for the Spring quarter includes Professors Sargent, Tarbell, and Leavitt. From time to time persons of note outside of the University will be secured to address the club.

The Divinity School

DR. E. D. BURTON

For a quarter of a century preceding the founding of the University of Chicago in 1892, the Divinity School, then known as the Baptist Union Theological Seminary, enjoyed uninterrupted prosperity. The Seminary was located at Morgan Park, Illinois, and remained there until, by a stipulation of the founder of the new University of Chicago, it became a part of the new institution; and provision was made by the founder for endowment and maintainance of the Divinity School on the University campus.

The Divinity School, as constituted at the present time, comprises four distinct divisions: (1) The Graduate Divinity School, designed primarily for college graduates; (2) The English Theological Seminary, offering a four years' prescribed curriculum in English subjects, resident courses being given in the summer quarter and nonresident correspondence courses in the other three quarters of the year; (3) The Dano-Norwegian Theological Seminary; (4) The Swedish Theological Seminary. The bulk of instruction in the two last mentioned in given in the Scandinavian languages.

The enrollment of students in the several divisions for the current year is as follows:

Graduate and unclassified students	318
English Theological Seminary	40
Dano-Norwegian Theological Seminary	9
Swedish Theological Seminary	37
Total	404

One of the Divinity School activities which is worthy of special mention is the Evangelical Band. Trips were made to Ottawa, Illinois, under the leadership of Mr. C. C. LONG; to Wauconda, Illinois, under the leadership of Mr. ERB; and to Indiana Harbor under the leadership of Mr. LOCKHART. The campaigns were well organized and aggressive and the results were gratifying. The devotional meetings under the direction of Mr. Long have been inspiring and have aroused more than usual interest. Other activities, social as well as religious, have received the enthusiastic support of the students, more than one hundred having attended the banquet held April 27th.

A DEAN OF INSTRUCTION NECESSARY

Graduate Student in Sociology O: "Professor Vincent, on what ground do you imagine our Professor Starr lays down the proposition that England in twenty years will be a nation of dependents, delinquents, and defectives?"

(The third new pair of glasses in imminent peril of fracture): "U-um, possibly earthquake ground. Whom was he trying to shock?"

WE ARE TAUGHT

"The Dark Ages used to be a sort of tunnel. History students liked to come to it because they were shot thru quickly and didn't see much. Now we know that the darkness is in our knowledge and not in the period."

"The average intelligent American thinks there are only two kinds of foreigners, Dutch and Dagos."

"Self governing means not being disagreeable about anything any one else wants, because you may want something like it yourself pretty soon."

"A Normal is a sublimated High School."

"The United States Constitution is a jersey, not a straight jacket."

(Borrowed): "Some of our business men object to the fellow with the college "finish." They mean the kind of man who is held up by a three inch Arrow collar, a sort of high picket fence built around an insane asylum. His hair, too, generally has a wet muskrat effect."

VINCENTENIAN OBSERVATIONS AND OTHER THINGS

"Your papers show you are properly trained young American phonographs."

"The Kentucky mountaineers believe in real democracy—real equality of economic condition and esteem. One man told me of a family who got ahead considerable but folks began dropping in and 'et 'em back!"

"You can never trust human nature. There was a fellow in my class at college who used to supply us with globes for astronomy with equators painted on for $1.50. We discovered that he got girls to paint them for him free and then he took them (the girls) to Sunday evening chapel services and other inexpensive entertainments."

TAKING TOLL OF ABSENCES IN SOCIOLOGY OO

Appel: "We don't get cuts for election day, do we?"

He: "Yes."

Appel: "The law gives us two hours on that day."

He: "Only from work and useful occupations."

New Words to an Old Song

(With a Cynics' Apologies)

So long as neath the o'd Maroon
  Our teams shall win—and lose,
So long as yellow journalists
  Shall sell old lies for news,
So long as careless studes shall see
  The lights of naughty town,
So long as Mother gets the check
  When Father turns us down,
    If you love me as I love you
    Old Alma Mater, we'll be true.

So long as Aces take the King
  And stewards take the rest,
So long as festive tailors wait,
  While waiters guard the fest,
So long as he who longs to drink
  Unchastened may get drunk,
So long as fools who cannot think,
  Can crib instead of flunk,
    If you love me as I love you
    What dean can cut our love into?

So long as late on Partlett's floor,
  We dip—or merely waltz,
And dare to doubt the doubt that dares
  To think blue eyes are false,
So long as music, lights, and wax,
  And well-fit evening clothes
Can still the burring taxi's tax
  And thoughts of what one owes,
    If you love me for just tonight
    Somehow the rest shall be all right.

So long as lessons are made less
  Than class activities,
And tears and timely tutoring
  Avail for a degree;
While Foster, Green, Midlothian,
  And Jimmy's drown our ills,
While there is still the old-clothes man
  And Dad, to pay the bills,
    If you love me as I love, dear,
    Should Prof or text-book interfere?

By Course-book, Verdant Cap and Check,
  By Pool and P. C. A.,
By Pledge-Pin, Program, Cobb and Clock,
  By Convocation Day,
By Work, Co-Education, Chums,
  By Flunks and Lovett's frown,
By Poker Chip and Championship,
  Diploma, Cap and Gown,
    We've lived and loved because of you,
    Old Alma Mater—and we're true.

H. R. Baukhage, '11

A Line-O'-Type or Two

ON HELICON

To head the Line! It seems romance—
A happy stroke of circumstance.
A dream long cherished has come true,
And leaves me (as I'm sure 'twould you)
Almost too full for utterance.

Come, Pegasus, your prettiest prance!
The editor this favor grants
For which so many vainly sue:
To head the Line!

Caper, old Peg, curvet, advance,
Get up on your hind-legs and dance.
Unfurl your wings and try the blue.
Now spiral glide! Whoa! That will do.
Some honor, Peg, to get the chance
To head the Line.

WON'T YOU DO SOMETHING FOR THE CAP AND GOWN? THE CANNERY

From The Daily Maroon: "The coming smoker," said President Teichgraeber, when interviewed yesterday, "will surpass all previous efforts of the club."

Indiana has recently installed a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

The competition for the lyrics of the Blackfriars play will positively close next Friday.

The coming Score club dance will be the most unique and successful ever held. The ticket sale breaks all records.

The Eighteenth Annual Washington Prom, to be held February 21, will doubtless be the best ever held at the University.

The members of the Pow Wow say that the debate to be held at their next meeting will be the best of the year. The subject announced is as follows: "Resolved: That Napoleon was greater than Bonaparte."

Discussed in Mr. Gorsuch's Public Speaking 1: University Innovations; (a) A new woman's gymnasium, (b) An elevator in Cobb.

QUERY: When will the end man in the choir learn the last verse of our Alma Mater?

Heard at Greenwood Hall table:

Frightened Freshman: "Er- --er- - -who is Alma Mater?"

Staid Senior (frigidly): "Why, Mrs. Judson, of course. Who did you think it was?"

Frightened Freshman (meekly): "Oh, I thought maybe it was Miss Talbot."

One of Mrs. Flint's criticisms: "Your vocabulary is poor and meager but it is amply sufficient to express your thoughts."

BEFORE THE W. A. A. VAUDEVILLE

White placards dot the campus o'er
In every public place,
Which warn the passer-by to keep
His eye upon this space.

Some campus wag in passing wrote,
As campus wags will do,
"If from this space your eye will rove
Just use Le Page's glue."

WHY SHOULD THE DAILY MAROON PUBLISH THE FOLLOWING?

"Girls at Nebraska worked a tag scheme to benefit the daily paper at that institution."
—From The Daily Nebraskan.

INITIATION!

Roy stood on the bank at mid-day
And called to his mates to follow,
Then with the shriek of the "Sacred Ducks"
He slid into Sleepy Hollow.

SPEAKING OF IDEAS

Our idea of nothing to wash with—The liquid soap furnished by the University.

Of nothing to do—History 19 (McLaughlin).

Of a hall girl's idea of perfect happiness—To have at least two telephone calls every night at dinner.

Of nothing to eat—Lexington commons food.

A freshman's idea of the Height of Affluence—No classes in Lexington.

Of nothing to read—New of the Colleges in the Daily Maroon.

THE GIRLS' JUBILEE

We love our glorious college
We love our valiant profs,
We love our many classes
Seniors, Juniors, Frosh, and Sophs.
But most of all we love our gym,
It limbers up our joints;
'Tis there we never meet a him
Nor gain those Awful
in-vain-looked-for dreaded useless
measly looking and atrocious
honor points!

BY THE WAY

Several people have asked us—can you tell us—in what direction does an honor point? Out?

NOTE—The poem at the beginning was actually written for us by Mr. Taylor, who has also edited these two pages. For these reasons we offer no apologies.

The Rime of the Ancient Graduate

PART I.

It is an ancient graduate,
And he stoppeth one of three:
"By thy long mustache and glittering eye,
Now wherefore stoppst thou me?
Old Bartlett's doors are opened wide,
The Settlement dance begun;
A thousand must be introduced,
And I'm the dance chairman."
He holds him with his skinny hand,
"There was a class," quoth he.
"Hold off! unhand me, gay-beard loon!"
Eftsoons his hand dropt he.
He holds him with his glittering eye—
The dance chairman stood still,
And listens like a three years' child;
The graduate hath his will.
"In nineteen ten the seniors each
Would have mustachio:
Below the nose, above the lips,
Where none before did grow.
One now Baukhage had, and his
Was black and stiff and strong,
All shiny, black and straight and stiff;
Ye gods, it was so long!
Hal Gifford had one sloping hair,
Our Vallee's tooth brush lip was there;
A wondrous hairless vision rare
Roy Baldridge's lip appeared.
For Crawley's three short waving wisps,
The girls all loudly cheered.
My lip was getting very rough;
The Juniors' praises loud
Rang out for this long lip of mine;
And I was very proud.

"God save thee ancient graduate,
From the fiends that plague thee so.
Why lookst like that?"—"With my Gillette
I shaved my mustachio."

PART II.

As often I had done before,
To class I came next morn.
But there as all my classmates stood—
Oh had I ne'er been born!
For I had done a hellish thing,
And it would work me woe,
So all averred in accents weird,
To shave my mustachio.
"Ah wretch," cried they, "you sure will pay
For that mustachio."
The Seniors all with one accord,
Had made this iron bound rule:
That all who shave their upper lip.
Must go into the pool.

PART III.

With throat all dry, with knees shaking,
I could not laugh nor wail;
Through utter fear all dumb I stood!
I pinched my self and e'en drew blood!
I cried "Oh hear my tale!"
A pretty girl asked me to go—"
"Enough," Hal Gifford cried,
"Far better 'twere for you dear boy,
To have fallen sick and died."
I wept and begged. Of no avail.
What wretches all were they,
To throw me in that ice cold tank,
That ice cold winter day!

PART IV.

O dance chairman my tale is told.
One word and that the last.
He groweth best, he raiseth best,
Mustaches great and small,
Who lets them grow the whole quarter,
In spite of girls and all.
The graduate whose head was bald,
Whose beard with age was hoar,
Is gone, and now the dance chairman
Goes in upon the floor.
He went and danced the whole night through,
He danced with every lass.
But ne'er forgot the few last words,
"Don't buck the senior class."

His First Call

Resolutely striding out from the shadow of Law, the Freshman made his way towards the women's halls. When he had arrived at about even with one of the chains stretched across from the Geology building, he noticed that his breath wasn't coming just right, but he squared his shoulders, and attempted an unconcerned whistle. As he neared the corner he became very conscious of his new "tans." He managed to shove one in front of the other, but it was with a sort of "second-wind" desperation—left foot, right foot, left foot, right foot.

Reaching the end of the walk, he stumbled a jerky, mechanical turn toward the right and worked on toward Foster. Tin-soldier-like became his locomotor activities. He fancied he felt cruel, feminine glances piercing him from the countless windows on his left; and the wind rustling through the trees, seemed to break the silence of the Sabbath afternoon with a giggle.

He gained Green, struggled on towards Kelly. He started to search for his card-case but remembering his watch, reached for it instead. Three o'clock. Yes, that was the hour she had named. But wait! Was it this Sunday or—No. She had said next Sunday and since she had spoken to him Friday she must have meant—

But horrors! He was at the steps and in a moment was stumbling up to the door, from which was issuing a bevy of girls. They brushed by him with a titter that left him blushing hotly.

He looked for a bell and, finding it, read, "night bell." The pall about him thickened; the card was grewsomely suggestive of apothecaries' and undertakers' shops. In desperation he flung himself against the door and sprawled into the vestibule.

Inside, he encountered another door and another bell. He pressed it, and waited, lowering steadily toward the floor and praying that it might be rent asunder and he dropped into sweet oblivion, or somewhere. Footsteps sounded and he felt, rather than saw, himself confronted on the other side of the glass door by a formidable looking person clad in black dress and white cap. Intuitively, he opened the door and whispered hoarsely, "Is Miss—" But no need. She was and she was so glad to see him and wasn't it hot, and wouldn't he rather take a walk in the park, and would he wait a minute? It was; and he would; and they did.

Pilot Mound, Missouri, Jan. 17th, 1911

Dean Lovett,

Dear Sir:

Would it be possible for you to let me know how many cuts I have? I am home at my sister's wedding, and if I haven't too many I would like to stay until the end of the week.

Respectfully yours,

P. B. ————.

Later letter from same student:

Chicago, Illinois, Feb. 9, 1911.

Dean Lovett,

Dear Sir:

Enclosed you will find two notices. The "non-attendance notice" was for my absence January 17th to January 25th.

It was due on account of two reasons. In the first place I went home for my sister's wedding that took place January 21st. In the second place I was suffering from over-strained nerves. I had been in constant attendance with my physician and as my condition became alarmingly worse I found it necessary to go to him at once.

It is for these reasons that I apply to you for the removal of my cuts due to bad sickness.

Respectfully yours,

P. B. ————.

Rosternville, Kansas, Friday, 1910.

President Chicago College,

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly tell me please some information as to whether your college teaches about agriculture? If so, what are the ways to get in? If not so what would be the name of some school by or near Chicago somewheres around the depot.

I am much obliged in advance,

(Signed) C. R. Jones.

My Dear Mr. Hines:

Replying to your letter of January 6, 1911, I would say that the University of Chicago has no department of agriculture. You will find a good school of agriculture at Urbana, a college with a genuine country atmosphere, five hours ride from the University of Chicago.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) F. J. S.

Rubaiyat of a Flunker

This morn a yellow notice came my Way,
'Tis like the Notices of Yesterday,
And this makes three—a fatal number that Shall take my Honors and Degrees away
Ah, has not such a story from of old
Down Man's successive generations roll'd
Of such a clever, earnest Student cast
By blinded Faculty from out the Fold?
You know, my friends, with what a brave Carouse
I got my Studies in mine own Frat House,
With dampened Towels wrapped about my Head,
At Night when all was quiet as a Mouse.
Strange, is it not, that of the Myriads who Before us passed Required Courses through,
Not one bestows a Note-book good enough
But we, poor Brutes, must always study too?
Myself, each day, did eagerly frequent
Doctor and Dean, and heard great Argument
And thought I knew each Course, but evermore
Came out by the same door wherein I went.
In Law the seed of Wisdom did I sow,
In chapel occupied the foremost row
And this was all the harvest that I reap'd—
"I came like Water and like Wind I go."
The Moving Finger writes, and having writ
Moves on; and so do they whom Flunks do hit
No grease nor pull can cancel half a Line
You're just a Flunker—that's the End of it

LAWRENCE OSCAR COOPER

BALDRIDGE AND HARMS ON Y. M. C. A. INVESTIGATION

Why doesn't some one write a story for CAP AND GOWN about:

The football hero, who having bid goodnight to one fair Greenwood maid blunders in upon the domestic peace of two others in a first floor room instead of escaping thru the unpeopled vestibule?

The Maroon editor who called at one of the halls at 2:30 a. m. to take two enthusiastic women reporters to watch the Daily Maroon go to press?

The hall freshman who set an alarm clock under the davenport where her bosom enemy was to entertain a man.

ONE MORE KINK IN THE HONOR POINT SYSTEM

A group of progressive business minded Phi Beta Kappa students have organized the Collegiate Insurance, which is now offering the following policies to all students who can present a certificate of intellectual health: Paid up Quarterly Policies for 6-9 honor points, and Four Year Honorable Mention Endowment Policies.

The premium for 6 honor points is 1 hour's study daily and 1 night's cramming before exams, or its equivalent in bluffing power; for more honor points, the premium increases in geometric proportion. For the four year honorable mention endowment policy, the premium is two nights at home per week and Saturday morning in the Library, or its equivalent in judgment of snap courses and the psychology of the prof.

The following have already applied for policies:

The Way a Freshman Comes out to the U

Apologies to Southey

THE CLUB IN ACTION

How does a Freshman
Come out to the "U"?
A little boy asked me
Thus, once on a time,
And moreover he asked me
To tell him in rhyme.
So, I told him in rhyme,
(I had rhymes quite a few)
It is thus that a Freshman
Comes out to the "U."
From high-schools diverse,
Some better, some worse,
Right off from the farm
Where he's never known harm,
He comes to the city
A terrible pity.

There he gets quite a shocking
From Three-quarter Club knocking
He's made to go running
All pretty girls shunning,
No one heeds his groaning
Or disconsolate moaning
So hurrying and skurrying
And darting and parting
And shaking and quaking
Now smoking, now choking
Turning and twisting
Around and around,
Now shouting, now spouting,
Deafening and dizzying the ear with his sound.
Retreating and beating and meeting and treating
Delaying and straying and playing and praying,
Advancing and prancing, and glancing and dancing,
Recoiling, turmoiling, and boiling and toiling,
Dreaming and gleaming and streaming and beaming,
And "rushing," "four-flushing," and blushing and gushing,
And so never-ending, but always ascending,
Knowledge and pleasure, experience blending
Till at last it is true that the year is all thru
'Tis thus that a Freshman comes out to the U.

"MULTUM IN PARVO": Appel, Daly, Donovan and Morrison in chorus: "But Napoleon was not the only little man at that."

That Book

Now who can say that English here
Is plain or terse, concise or clear?
No unity is here employed,
And of coherence it is void;
And as to sense, beyond a doubt,
None ever yet has found that out;
And should the Sphinx again appear
This book would make it flee in fear;
And Solomon upon his throne
Would vanish with a fatal groan;
Not even Deans with utmost pain
Could any meaning here explain.

How They Sprang from Emmons Blaine to Cobb

I sprang from the class room, and Alice and she,
I sprinted, Fan sprinted, we sprinted all three,
"Good speed!" cried the janitor, and back the door drew.
And "speed!" cried the students to us running thru.
Behind shut the big door; the sounds sank to rest
And cross the lot vacant we galloped abreast.
Not a word to each other; we kept the great pace,
Neck by neck, stride by stride, never changing our pace.
I clung to my note-books and felt for my theme,
Then stuck in each hairpin—but always a dream—
Would the fates sure be with us—would nine forty-five
And Cobb on the fourth floor see us there alive?
'Twas early at starting but while we drew near
The gym girls tripped out and the bell clanged out clear.
At Law a great black crowd all came out to see
As we fluttered by them—Fan, Alice and me.
One whispered, "The tall one, I bet you a dime!"
While Alice gasped brokenly, "Yet there is time!"
At Haskell, Fan groaned; one heard the quick wheeze
Of her breath, saw the stretched neck, the staggering knees,
Observed the hard sidewalk, an iced concrete plank,
As almost down, then down, Fan shuddered and sank.
At last in the far West a doorway gaped slight
And "run now" breathed Alice, "for Cobb is in sight!"
Up, up the iron stairs we two clattered and ran
When all in a moment, she gasped, "On—you can!"
And there on the oak seat she placed her whole weight.
But stopping nor naught could save her from her fate.
Then I cast loose my notebooks, each hairpin let fall,
And at length on the Fourth Floor I stood, after all!
Next what I remember's—an empty class room!
My short breaths come shorter, my cheeks left their bloom,
When across my mind inner there shot a bright ray
Which blazoned too late—"Consultation today!"

ARE THESE FRESHMEN

Quandary of a Freshman

They tell me that to be a Deke
My father must have bonds and gold;
To be a Delt I'll have to star
In some athletic game, I'm told.
I can't get in with Alpha Delts
Unless some brains I strive to show;
Phi Kappa Psi requires that I
Should go a pace that's not too slow.
If I can act or write a play
I'll get a bid from Delta U,
And S. A. E.'s, I've often heard
To politics must not be new.
A pres'dency of class or club
The Betas think I ought to make;
The Sigma Chi's—they judge one's clothes,
No Frosh in "ready-made" they'll take.
Most all Psi U's perform in meets,
In Bartlett tank I'd have to play;
To be a Phi Gam I'd announce
A new engagement every day.
To be a Chi Psi or Kappa Sig
I think would be a jolly lark,
And I am sure I'd qualify
For I come up from old Hyde Park.
If Phi Delt I would like to be
I must grow fat and lean toward Law
At smokers must an A. T. O.
All other pledges over-awe.
A Phi Kap pledge must bring with him
A chicken on which they may dine;
The Sigma Nu's in down town press,
And Delta Sigs in speaking shine.
Most any frat should honored feel
If I should deign to join its ranks;
Altho
A Senior said I'd better take Whatever I could get with thanks.

CLARA AND DICK

Some Public Speaking of our Athletics

I don't know that I have anything to say to you, but we all done—I mean did—the best we could Saturday. It was a hard game, but we did our best, and as long as we fight for the old Maroon, we will try to do our best. I haven't anything more to say to you, but we did our best.

It's going to be a good game Saturday. The fellers are all going to play hard. You ought to get out and support the team, and cheer us on to victory. I hope you'll come to the game. We'll try to beat. I hope you'll come.

We had an awful good time in Japan. We all got sea-sick going over, but we had an awful good time there. The Japanese girls are good looking, but some of the fellows were mighty anxious to get letters from the girls back here on the campus. Everybody over there asked us to banquets, and gave us fine things to eat. We beat Waseda, but they were a nice team to play against. The scenery is very attractive; you ought to go over to Japan and see it.

REMEDY: MORE PUBLIC SPEAKING FOR OUR ATHLETES

(A speech taken down in short hand in a public speaking 3 class):

All candidates for the Varsity C should have a requirement of two majors of public speaking.

Why put this grievous burden on our athletes? Because these athletes have more need for effective speaking than anyone else. They have to talk more. They have to talk at the most important function in college—the mass meeting. Talking most,they should talk best, but strangely, they talk not only not best, but often least well. It seems inconsistent that men who can so splendidly coordinate body and head on the gridiron, the diamond, and the track, should fail so signally in coordinating head and body on the platform. Yet you know this is true. Think of the boring mass meetings you have attended. Think of the speeches you have longed to do yourself rather than listen to the agonized utterances of our heroes. Remember the mass meeting to celebrate the return of the baseball team from Japan; remember how every one went to sleep; how every one would have gone home but for the fact that Mr. Vincent had not yet spoken. I have asked 519 prominent people on the campus what they think of this matter, and of them 503 agreed that our athletes needed more training in speaking; the others were Varsity men.

Mr. Stagg is persuaded that more public speaking will help "The boys;" so he endorses this plan heartily. Let us then, undertake the little red tape necessary for the administrative action to institute this requirement.

And Nary a Rain Check

Batter up!
Strike one!
Now the game is well begun.
Good ball!
Fair hit!
"Make a home! get a run!"
Drip, drip,
Players slip.
Soon the game is in a muddle,
Runners flop down in a puddle.
For 'tis raining out of doors.
Here is proof:
Through the roof,
In a stream the water pours.
"Heavens, stop!"
"Get the mop!"
The pitcher's nose receives a drop.

"Play Ball"

In Chapel occupied the foremost Row
And this was all the Harvest that I reap'd—
"I came like Water and like Wind I go."
The Moving Finger writes, and having writ
Moves on; and so do they whom Flunks do hit
No grease nor pull can cancel half a Line
You're just a Flunker—that's the End of it.

The Two Herricks

Elle Sonne

The poor professor does not know
  Why I can't keep the place;
He thinks I'm dull and tells me so,
  I take it in good grace.
I'm sure he neither knows nor cares
  Just why I watch my watch so well,
  But I am waiting for the bell
And She'll be waiting on the stairs.

My thots poor Balzac cannot claim
  With tales of chere Paris
This single sentence, "je vous aime"
  Is quite enough for me.
My testy ennui Balzac bears
  He knows the symptoms all too well,
  He know's I'm waiting for the bell,
He knows She's waiting on the stairs.

The poor professor writes each day
  A zero next my name;
And thus with each he speeds my way
  Toward Her, the one, Que j'aime
Bientot I'll flunk, adieu tristes cares
  I'll leave you when I leave this cell,
  We'll listen for another bell,
Quand nous have met upon the stairs.

THE WALL FROM COBB

BOBBIE AT THE BEACH

Another Rise and Fall

The University of Chicago, October 15, 1911.

DEAR MOTHER:

Just a word this time to say that I'm all right, for I'm going to a very important meeting, the first meeting of the Amateur Aviators. All the big fellows of the University will be there. Well, it's time, now, so good-bye.

With, love, HARRY.

The University of Chicago, October 18, 1911

DEAR MOTHER:

No, that wasn't a joke about the Amateur Aviators. Why, we're going to buy a monoplane to make trials with along the Midway. Going to race with autos. I say, you and Dad will have to come up to see our first, will you? Best love,

HARRY.

The University of Chicago, November 2, 1911

DEAR MOTHER:

Just time to tear off a note before I take the train for Philadelphia. Isn't it dandy that I am the delegate? The fellows want me to look around to see which is the best kind for us to buy. That is, we may not buy it, exactly. Perhaps we can sort of borrow one. Must go now.

With love, HARRY.

DEAR MOTHER:

Big day, today. A local inventor, Mr. Barker, talked to the club at the 10:30 hour. We're going to buy a Santos Dumont Demoiselle with our $25.00, so I guess it was alright about the Club deciding not to send me to Philadelphia. I'm going over to get Stagg's permission to keep our machine in the basement of Bartlett, so goodbye.

HARRY.

DEAR MOTHER:

Say, I don't get what Dad means when he writes that he won't contribute to help his son rise in that way. He's as bad as the faculty. All their offers of money are tied down, and what we want is to raise the "dough." That's quite an aerial joke, isn't it? Well, anyhow talk to Dad.

Love, HARRY.

November 22nd, 1911

DEAR MOTHER:

Today we're going to show the people around here a few things. At four o'clock, Mr. Barker makes his trial flight. I'm off for Marshall Field, now, so goodbye. Will write after the flight. HARRY.

N. B. November 23d. Well, what do you think? We were all over to the field, waiting for Barker, when a telegram was brought me. Barker had fallen from a motor cycle and broken his leg. When the crowd found that out they nearly died, and the Maroon featured it today this way: "Earthly Fall Prevents Heavenly Flight. Downfall to Hopes of Aero Club."

"OF THE DEMOISELLE TYPE"

The Dress of the Hour

A Tale of Hall Cooperation and Good Fellowship

When Mary Richardson announced that she was going to make a chiffon dress for the Blackfriar Prom, the hall laughed the idea to scorn, but when at dinner the night of the dance, Mary announced that the dress was merely cut out, the girls rose in a body to help her put it together. The courage that had dared to whack out that $3.00 per yard stuff deserved the reward of that dress for the Prom.

Excusing themselves before coffee, eight self-appointed modistes hastened to Mary's room to look the situation in the face. There on the table lay a handful of soft silky treacherous chiffon, which must be a dress before eight o'clock. Neither trimmings nor silk for a foundation were in readiness, for Mary had ideas of her own about squandering money for inconspicuous details. A less bold and capable hall would have surrendered then and there to the impossible, but with dometsic art students and practical dressmakers in their midst, these girls were nothing daunted. After five minutes' survey, they hit upon the key to mastering the situation. They could make a dress in time, if they made it on Mary.

Mary had figured herself the chief workman and director of the undertaking, but she had not judged her helpers aright. She soon found herself standing meekly in the center of the floor—her $1.00 princess slip on—trying to obey the bewildering variety of orders of eight individual minded fast working girls. Alice and Sarah had sewed up the skirt with coarse, cotton thread, and with jerked firmness, were fixing it onto the slip in plaits around a high waistline. Two more girls sat on the floor, and turned up a crude ravelling hem with stitches which would have meant a "condition" in a textile course. The convenient border hid all traces of that effective haste. In the meantime, Kate and Dorothy struggled with the kimona-sleeved waist, and between her revolving at the direciont of the hemmers, Mary raised arms and lowered and raised them again, throughout the adjustment of the waist, like a windmill in a changeable wind. When the waist was securely fastened to the slip and the skirt, Dorothy sewed it into Mary with mighty stitches from neck to waistline, as irrevocably "on" as our unfeeling aunts used to sew on our doll's clothes. Artistic Rose improvised trimmings, by skillfully fashioning rose buds from the pink border of the chiffon, and sewed them at neck and sleeves. Lois folded a belt of the goods and stretched it around the multitude of stitches which marked the juncture of waist and skirt. The crisis had been met. Mary could wear that dress; as she had been sewed into it, Mary would have to wear that dress. There would have been time even to have sewed in sleeves, had the style demanded such troublesome adjustment.

After the storm and stress period of hurry was over the unanimity of the workers was shattered. The bone of contention was nothing more than a dozen of harmless pink roses, but the combat was nothing less than a drawn battle. Mouths bristled with pins and sharp words as the girls argued, one one side that the dress was too soft for the roses, the dress needed no ornament, Mary must carry the roses or wear them in her hair; and on the other side, that she had to wear them, that the dress needed just that touch, and that her hair was complete without ornament. She compromised by one rose at her ear, and several at her girdle, and the hurt spirits of the hall forgot their hurt in the search of the house for accessories that would match the pink chiffon gown.

At 8:15, Mary proudly left the hall, wearing her new chiffon dress, and Emily's pearl beads safely hidden beneath Dorothy's pink party cape and Helen's pink scarf, carrying Myrtle's pink slippers in Lois' pink bag. The dress makers watched her from a window upstairs, and beamed down a "Have a Good Time" look, and said to themselves "It's our fault if she does." They knew she would, but they didn't know until morning that they had sent Mary to the dance fifteen minutes too early.

The Professor

(With apologies to R. Kipling).
A fool there was—but he did his work
(Even as you and I)
For a Prof. who thought he was trying to shirk.
But the fool "plugged" on with never a smirk
Doing each day the daily work.
(Even as you and I!)
Oh, the years we waste, and the tears we waste,
And the work of our head and hand,
Belong to the teacher who did not know,
(And now we know that he did not know
And never did understand!)
The fool still grinded, on knowledge bent,
(Even as you and I!)
But brains to this fool the good Lord had not sent,
And he never dared ask what a question meant,

JIM WHITE LEONARD

So the fool had to follow his natural bent,
(Even as you and I)
His brain had grown, but his spirit had flown,
And the youth which he lost from his life
Must be charged to the teacher who did not know.
(And now we know that he never could know
And never could understand.)
The fool lost his health and he nearly went blind,
(Even as you and I!)
To this fool the professor was never kind,
The cause for his failures, the Prof. could not find,
So he kept him right on a perpetual grind,
(Even as you and I!)
And it isn't the shame, and it isn't the blame
That burns like a red-hot brand;
It's knowing what the question's about,
When a dark, sparkling eye puts our wits to rout,
So we cannot get any answer out,
And flunk when we understand.

Fate

The chimes' clang tells the tale of parting day,
The laughing girls come slowly in from school.
But one still sadly wends her dreary way
A theme a day for English IV's the rule.
Far from the gadding crowd's delightful talk,
Her sober thoughts must ever keep their way
Along the mem'ry haunted vale she'll walk
To find the subject for her theme a day.
For her, still more the midnight oil must burn;
No midnight feast can have her loving care.
No suitors come to her their fate to learn,
Or beg consent their lonely lives to share.
Beneath that shaded light, that green light shade,
Where grew the theme in ever towering heap,
Each word in proper place forever laid
The weary maid at last succumbs to sleep.
The waste of study and of candle power
And all that had her weary shoulders pained,
Awaits alike the inevitable hour
Her theme was read in class aloud.
Full many a theme of purest thought serene
The dark unfathomed depths of desk drawers dear,
Full many a work is writ to lie unseen
And waste its wisdom on the office air.

Good-Bye to the Quarter

(After Praed)

Goodbye to the Quarter! 'Tis over!
Cobb Hall is as still as a tomb;
The co-eds, the grind, and the loafer,
Make way for the janitor's broom.
There only is left the recorder,
Recording each flunk and each con,
Reducing the chaos to order,
Sending notices off by the ton.
Goodbye to the quarter! The quizzes
Whose end is to make or to break,
The instructor whose talk fairly fizzes,
The prof who cant' keep you awake;
The teams that our team should have beaten,
The scholarships we almost won,
The banquets where we might have eaten,
The themes which we just had begun;

"COMMIE"

The mornings asleep in the Chapel,
The evenings awake at the "house,"
The problems we hated to grapple,
After last evening's carouse.
Goodbye to the Quarter! Another
Will come with its proms and exams,
And gallop away like its brother,
In a whirlwind of cramming and "damns."
Will it come with its Senior moustaches
Grown longer, or shorter—or gone?
(Will its fondest hopes smoulder to ashes,
And flutter away with the dawn?)
Will Starr's courses be sparser or fatter?
Will books at the Press cost as high?
Will meals at the Commons—no matter!

WINCHESTER
Repeating Shotguns

USED IN THE U. S. ARMY.

The U. S. Army authorities know a gun; that is why, when they decided to equip some troops with repeating shotguns, they selected the Winchester in preference to all other makes. The experts of the U. S. Ordnance Board also know a gun; that's why, after submitting a Winchester Repeating Shotgun to all sorts of tests, they pronounced it safe, sure, strong and simple. If you want a shotgun—buy the one whose strength and reliability led the U. S. Army authorities to select it and the U. S. Ordnance Board to endorse it—that's the Winchester.
